E. LIVERPOOL MAN HELD IN ALLEGED RUM PLOT

SAMUEL SAKOL ARRESTED WITH 40 OTHERS IN BOSTON PROBE

Charged With Conspir- to Smuggle Million Dollar Cargo.

MINOR DEFENDANT

Chelsea Exchange Bank Officers Among Accused.

Samuel Sakol, former resident of East Liverpool, is one of eight minor defendants, who have been indicted with 33 others by a federal grand jury at Boston in connection with an alleged conspiracy to smuggle a million dollar liquor cargo into the United States, press dispatches today said.

83,000 Gallons Seized.

Sakol, who is said to have been in business here for several months, left East Liverpool for New York about two years ago. Since then he has resided at various places in the United States and Canada, friends say.

The principal defendants of the alleged plot are Lewis H. Rothchild, president of the Chelsea Exchange bank, of Boston and his two associates, Harold Smythe and James V. Eloise. Minor defendants in the case in addition to Sakol, whose names have been made public are: Frank Poole and Harry Bedell, Baltimore; Charles Schwartz, Charles Morrini and Samuel Lasar, Philadelphia; William F. Taten, San Francisco, and William G. Price, Norfolk, Va.

The contraband liquor, said to amount to approximately 83,000 gallons, was carried by the steamer Cretan, which docked at Boston last July, apparently with a cargo of cement. Federal prohibition officials, growing suspicious of the cargo, started an investigation. As a result, they say they uncovered what is believed to have been one of the most gigantic liquor smuggling schemes brought to light since the adoption of the prohibition amendment.

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 1.—The state's motion for a mistrial in the Hall-Mills murder case was denied by Judge Charles W. Parker this afternoon.

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 1.—Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, today made a motion for a mistrial in the Hall-Mills murder case, alleging the jury is antagonistic to the state, that it is prejudiced and that it has a preconceived opinion.

Defense Objection Overruled.

"I move for a mistrial," said Simpson, "on the ground that the jury has a preconceived opinion, that it has not been properly guarded and that members of the jury have been asleep while the case was being tried."

The motion was made immediately upon the opening of court at 10:22 a. m. Simpson asked the jury be excused. Judge Charles W. Parker sitting with Judge Frank L. Cleary, granted the request. As the jury filed out, Robert H. McCarter, chief counsel of the defense, arose and said that he had read in the papers of the plan of the prosecution and objected against Simpson being allowed to make a motion for a mistrial.

The court overruled McCarter.

The court took the prosecutor's motion for mistrial under advisement.

Judge Parker announced that after he and Judge Cleary had reached their conclusion concerning the motion they would decide "as to whether the defense might be heard on the motion."

"Your honor, I move for mistrial in this case," said Simpson, "because of the failure of the bailiffs to properly guard the jury, and also because some of the jurors have been asleep while this case has been going on, and also because two of the jurors were in conference with counsel for the defense without any guards, and also because one member of the jury called me a —— —— and little —— ——."

There was a dramatic pause.

COTTON GROWERS' CHIEF URGES BUSINESS MEN TO HELP SOLVE PROBLEMS OF AMERICAN FARMER

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A plea for the American business man to understand and help solve the problems of the American farmer in order to prevent a political and economic conflict between agriculture and industry was made today through International News Service by C. O. Moser, of Memphis, Tenn., president of the American Cotton Growers Exchange.

"Through no fault of the cotton grower other than he was efficient enough to produce 4,000,000 bales more than could be consumed he is facing bankruptcy and the country as a whole has suffered a loss of $500,000,000," declared Moser. "It is more than a sectional debacle, being inextricably interwoven with the nation's financial and industrial life.

"The wheat grower of the middle west has suffered a similar economic experience within the past few years. If the agricultural situation is not solved 35,000,000 farmers will be ripe for radicalism.

Cotton Debacle.

"Such an economic catastrophe as the cotton debacle is a challenge to the intelligence of the country. A solution must be found either through private genius or through governmental agencies. The great mass of farmers, both of the south and middle west, do not believe the administration has made any conscientious effort to aid their plight.'

Moser interrupted the interview to explain that he was speaking from his personal knowledge of the farmers' viewpoint and not as an official of his organization which comprises 300,000 southern cotton growers.

"The government has helped industry with its difficulties through legislation and there is no reason why it should not do the same for agriculture," asserted Moser. "The business man and the metropolitan newspaper apparently do not understand the attitude of the farmer. The agricultural problem is a national problem of serious import and needs their study and support."

Moser said that while the southern farmer felt his problems to be distinctive in many ways from that of the middle-western farmer that if the present cotton disaster were repeated often enough it would force a political alliance between the two sections of the country.

Moser was asked his opinion on the drafting of the new McNary-Haugen bill for the stabilization of agriculture through the creation of a government corporation to export surplus farm products.

Moser said he did not believe the members of his organization would be interested in the export feature of the bill.

"Cotton is unlike other agricultural products in that it needs a world stabilization of prices," he said. "It cannot have one domestic price and another export price."

Moser, who has just returned from an inspection of the European textile industry, said he had found the textile business abroad in poor shape, with the British market in the worst condition and France doing better than other countries.

"In all countries the low price of American raw cotton had unsettled the market and affected the mills adversely," he said. "Owners said that the low price of the raw material had forced them to sell the finished product at a low figure."

Commenting on the new textile commerce commission inquiry into cotton freight rates, Moser predicted that it would be found the railroads were charging too high a tariff.

Moser is leaving today for Memphis where he will report concerning his trip abroad to his organization on December 15.

COTTON GROWERS' CHIEF URGES BUSINESS MEN TO HELP SOLVE PROBLEMS OF AMERICAN FARMER

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A plea for the American business man to understand and help solve the problems of the American farmer in order to prevent a political and economic conflict between agriculture and industry was made today through International News Service by C. O. Moser, of Memphis, Tenn., president of the American Cotton Growers Exchange.

"Through no fault of the cotton grower other than he was efficient enough to produce 4,000,000 bales more than could be consumed he is facing bankruptcy and the country as a whole has suffered a loss of $500,000,000," declared Moser. "It is more than a sectional debacle, being inextricably interwoven with the nation's financial and industrial life.

"The wheat grower of the middle west has suffered a similar economic experience within the past few years. If the agricultural situation is not solved 35,000,000 farmers will be ripe for radicalism.

Cotton Debacle.

"Such an economic catastrophe as the cotton debacle is a challenge to the intelligence of the country. A solution must be found either through private genius or through governmental agencies. The great mass of farmers, both of the south and middle west, do not believe the administration has made any conscientious effort to aid their plight.'

Moser interrupted the interview to explain that he was speaking from his personal knowledge of the farmers' viewpoint and not as an official of his organization which comprises 300,000 southern cotton growers.

"The government has helped industry with its difficulties through legislation and there is no reason why it should not do the same for agriculture," asserted Moser. "The business man and the metropolitan newspaper apparently do not understand the attitude of the farmer. The agricultural problem is a national problem of serious import and needs their study and support."

Moser said that while the southern farmer felt his problems to be distinctive in many ways from that of the middle-western farmer that if the present cotton disaster were repeated often enough it would force a political alliance between the two sections of the country.

Moser was asked his opinion on the drafting of the new McNary-Haugen bill for the stabilization of agriculture through the creation of a government corporation to export surplus farm products.

Moser said he did not believe the members of his organization would be interested in the export feature of the bill.

"Cotton is unlike other agricultural products in that it needs a world stabilization of prices," he said. "It cannot have one domestic price and another export price."

Moser, who has just returned from an inspection of the European textile industry, said he had found the textile business abroad in poor shape, with the British market in the worst condition and France doing better than other countries.

"In all countries the low price of American raw cotton had unsettled the market and affected the mills adversely," he said. "Owners said that the low price of the raw material had forced them to sell the finished product at a low figure."

Commenting on the new textile commerce commission inquiry into cotton freight rates, Moser predicted that it would be found the railroads were charging too high a tariff.

Moser is leaving today for Memphis where he will report concerning his trip abroad to his organization on December 15.

Police Warn Motorists To Be Careful During Yule Season

Observe Driving and Safety Regulations During Christmas Buying Period, Urges Chief McDermott.

Chief of Police McDermott today warned motorists to be particularly careful in driving through the downtown retail district.

"Be just as careful now, early in December, as you would be ordinarily during the few days shopping rush just preceding Christmas," the chief said. "People are doing their Christmas buying much earlier than usual in East Liverpool this season. Women and children, intent on their purchases, are in constant danger.

"Every motorist should observe all driving and safety regulations more carefully during the next three weeks than at any other season of the year," the chief added.

"During the next few days please bear in mind that the Christmas buying season has started early this year, and that ordinary late-December traffic conditions already prevail."

He further pointed out that this is the season when greater numbers of children than normally are on the downtown streets. Most of them are chaperoned by parents or others, but many youngsters are attracted to the downtown stores by the spirit of Christmas and are often "on their own." Motorists, said McDermott, should exercise extreme caution because of this situation.

"The motorist expects to be careful during the week before Christmas, when the downtown streets are jammed," the chief said. "His attention should likewise be called to the fact that the downtown early Christmas shopping traffic is unprecedently heavy now."

What Pretty Girl Did For Sick Stomach

Miss E. Rich of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I don't know what the cause was, but every few days my stomach would feel all bloated up with gas, my appetite was poor and I felt sick to my stomach—to say nothing of headaches.

"I never thought of using Carter's Little Liver Pills until nothing seemed to help. After using Carter's I felt relieved at once—and now as soon as my stomach 'talks' back I answer with Carter's and have the last word."

Judge W. F. Lones Will Speak Sunday At C. E. Society Meet

Common Pleas Judge W. F Lones, Wellsville, will address members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Methodist Protestant church at a meeting at 6:30 o'clock next Sunday evening. His subject will be "character: How to Firm it! What Affects it!" A male quartet from the First Presbyterian church will sing. The public is invited.

House Puzzles Two Nations.

A small house at Oost Cappel on the Belgian-French border is causing much concern to chiefs of customs in Brussels and Paris. The front door is in one country and the back door in the other. The French authorities are disturbed because dutable articles pass into the Belgian door and out of the rear into French territory. The Belgians are concerned when the route is reversed. No solution of the problem has yet been found.

A Possible King

The small boy in this picture has the support of Roumanian party leaders as the successor to the throne. He is Prince Michael, son of Princess Helen (pictured here) of Greece, Carol's deserted wife. King Ferdinand is reported to have told the former Crown Prince Carol he was willing to rescind his renunciation of the throne. Carol, rather than his small son, has the support of powerful factions. If the young Michael is given the throne, his mother would be regent.

Judge W. F. Lones Will Speak Sunday At C. E. Society Meet

Common Pleas Judge W. F Lones, Wellsville, will address members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Methodist Protestant church at a meeting at 6:30 o'clock next Sunday evening. His subject will be "character: How to Firm it! What Affects it!" A male quartet from the First Presbyterian church will sing. The public is invited.

House Puzzles Two Nations.

A small house at Oost Cappel on the Belgian-French border is causing much concern to chiefs of customs in Brussels and Paris. The front door is in one country and the back door in the other. The French authorities are disturbed because dutable articles pass into the Belgian door and out of the rear into French territory. The Belgians are concerned when the route is reversed. No solution of the problem has yet been found.

A Possible King

The small boy in this picture has the support of Roumanian party leaders as the successor to the throne. He is Prince Michael, son of Princess Helen (pictured here) of Greece, Carol's deserted wife. King Ferdinand is reported to have told the former Crown Prince Carol he was willing to rescind his renunciation of the throne. Carol, rather than his small son, has the support of powerful factions. If the young Michael is given the throne, his mother would be regent.

Driving Sense

Detroit, where most of the automobiles are made, ought to know something about driving them. Detroit's latest driving ordinance embodies the result of careful observation and contains some features that deserve the respectful consideration of other communities. For example:

Not more than one sticker is permitted on any car, and it must be not more than 4 by 12 inches and must be placed in the lower, right-hand corner of the windshield. That will leave the glass, all round, fairly free for the driver to see through—which is really what the glass is intended for.

No more than three people are allowed on the front seat of a car, and the driver is not allowed to have anyone, either child or grown-up, sitting on his lap. Furthermore, the driver is forbidden to have one arm out of commission by reason of its being around some other person. To insure further that the driver's attention is not distracted from his main job, it is laid down that no passenger shall have an arm around the driver.

All this is drastic. But it is common sense, and is calculated to promote alike the safety of drivers, passengers and outsiders.

Free British Nations

The British family of nations has now agreed formally that all its individual members are free and equal, with only mutual good will and a figurehead king to do the honors as head of the family.

With good British sense, the committee that has been at work on this matter announces that it is satisfied nothing could be gained by trying to lay down a constitution for the British Empire, consisting as it does of units with different characteristics, different histories and different stages of development. Instead, it simply defines the existing condition of the dominions and states a few principles and recommendations. The first principle is:

"They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, in any respect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British commonwealth of nations."

To this an explanatory comment is added by the committee:

"Every self-governing member of the empire is now master of its destiny. In fact, if not always in form, it is subject to no compulsion whatever."

In carrying on negotiations with other countries, as a matter of courtesy to the members of the family, any member of the commonwealth will keep all the others fully informed and any of them may express an opinion on the subject.

It is a fine forward step and, somehow, typically British. The development has been inevitable and its formal acknowledgment is now made without any fuss or shouting or ever-stressing of its real importance.

The Left-over Gift

If you bought a gift for some one, to be presented during a visit with that person in you own home, and then the visit was cancelled, what would you do with the present?

That is the dilemma one Y. M. C. A. finds itself in because of the hurried conclusion of the Roumanian royal visit to the United States. A "Girl Reserve" bracelet of silver and blue and white enamel was made especially for the Princess Ileana. It was all full of symbolism and very pretty.

But the princess was unable to visit that city, so the trinket is suddenly the subject of a special meeting of association officials.

Right off-hand one wonders why they don't simply forward the gift to the princess with their regrets that she couldn't visit them. But there have been other suggestions which seem to complicate matters. Some people think the bracelet should be kept as a sort of trophy to be worn by specially honored Girl Reserve officers each year. Others think the ungiven gift might well be kept on hand as a lesson on the fickleness of royalty. Or it might be held for the next visiting princess.

The more suggestions are made, the more difficult the problem becomes. Which is a not uncommon situation when democracy tries to hobnob with royalty.

The Mother-Teacher

The irrepressible Bernard Shaw is up in arms because a scholarly and able married woman, head of a girls' school in England, is discharged because she has a baby.

'It would be far more sensible," he says, "to refuse to allow any woman to become a teacher unless she had at least one baby and looked after it properly."

That rule would be hard to apply literally. It might result in a serious shortage of teachers. Yet there can be little doubt that a mother's experience with her own children gives an intelligent woman an understanding of children and knowledge of handling them which is hard to acquire otherwise. The mother who has time and strength to teach other people's children should be peculiarly fitted for the work, if she has also the usual teacher's qualifications.

The French, who have been very much peeved because their money was falling in value, are now peeved because it's rising.

My Favorite Stories

ALL THE WAY BACK TO MOSES.

When you start tracing the family history of a wheeze you very often are due to a long journey back into the misty realms of antiquity and before you get through may find yourself qualifying as an ethnologist.

Once upon a time, I was writing a supposedly humorous article on the favorite dishes of various nations. I came to a point where I undertook to be facetious touching on the food of Britishers, and in this connection pulled a line which ran something like this:

"The average Englishman has but three standard vegetables, to wit boiled potatoes, boiled cabbage and another helping of boiled potatoes."

Response to this whimsey was immediate. A serious-minded Englishman in Canada by mail promptly took me to task. He pointed out that I had been guilty of a deliberate misstatement, one which reflected either upon my intelligence or my mathematical sense. For, as he very correctly observed, I have spoken of three vegetables and really named but two.

Also, from faraway Australia came another letter, also written by a transplanted Englishman, who writing more in charity than anger, deplored my intelligence of the scope and variety of the vegetable kingdom as found in the British Isles. He cited at least forty different varieties of edible vegetables which, he said were consumed on the tables of his countrymen at home, including such staples as the marrow, the rutabaga, the mangel wurzel, and the scarlet runner bean.

But that is not the main point I was getting at. As a matter of fact, my joke which seemed to have gone widely astray in the colonies was an adaptation of a very old joke. I merely had paraphrased the ancient anecdote of the little girl at school, who, being asked by her teacher to name six animals found in the Arctic region, answered:

"Three walruses and three polar bears."

Not long ago, I mentioned this incident, substantially as I have here recited it in the presence of a distinguished antiquarian, whereupon he told me that for the source of the joke I must hark back several thousand years. The very same story, he said had been used in slightly different form by a Greek fabulist who antedated even Aesop.

I am expecting now to hear that when the archeologists finish exploring the tomb of Tutankhamen they'll unearth a hieroglyphic which, when translated will prove to be a rendition of the same wheeze.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A decided drop in the cost of living in New York is forecast within the next year. This is especially true for those who reside in apartment hotels. The town has been on an apartment hotel building spree for some months.

In almost every mid-town block buildings have been raked down to make way for living quarters. The servant and other problems have relegated house-keeping to the scrap heap of lost arts. Wives have found a surcease from petty worries in this new freedom. It seems the sensible way to live in a big city.

There is no dusting, sweeping, window washing or curtain cleaning to do. A push of an electrical button brings a waiter or maid. Butlers by the hour when company comes are available. Meals are swished up piping hot from well regulated kitchens via the dumb waiter.

And a tenant may lock up the place on a moment's notice and be absent for days with a feeling of security. There are no prying, gossipy neighbors to discuss one's affairs. Mail tubes, taxis and other modern conveniences are at hand.

Until recently an increase of 5,000 apartment hotel rooms a year was a record and during the process of absorption apartment hotels had their problem. Now in one single year the increase has reached the proportions of 30,000 rooms.

These must be filled and it is obvious that to fill them with result in a slash of rentals. The demand is here, but the plain fact is there are not enough persons with salaries adequate to pay the very high rentals.

There are, by the way, very few 13th floors in modern office or hotel buildings. It is a bow to the superstitious and the numbers leap from 12 to 14. Very few will occupy a 13th floor.

It is becoming strictly bourgeoisie to wear formal dress to Saturday night pleasures in Manhattan. The cafes, the theatres and supper clubs are beginning to spot those who wear evening clothes as aliens in a sophisticated herd. All the exclusive haunts ordinarily frowning on informal habiliments consider them proper on this night. It is one evening in the week when patrons may be distinguished from waiters.

An observing pedestrian has observed that the famous twin stone lions in front of the public library are not exact replicas. On each lion the tail is curled toward the steps.

One of the most vivid touches of realism the stage has presented this season is a cabaret "hoofer" solemnly crossing himself in the dressing room before going out to face the ringside mob. They do that in real life.

A cold light on one of those midnight to dawn courtships and marriages was revealed in a telegram from the groom to his intimate friend filed in a lonely village up the Hudson next day. It read: "We got drunk, married and the hebegeebies."

And there is that current story of a certain playwright who went on a protracted bender and awakened in a London hotel without a single remembrance of crossing the ocean. He wired to his club: "In case anyone inquires for me I am not there."

A Broadway simile: "As helpful as a glass eye at a keyhole.

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Indians and Their Oil Money.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—On and after December 1, Uncle Sam, through the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Department of the Interior, will cease to be responsible for bills incurred without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, by the Osage Indians, who are his wards.

This measure was not adopted because Uncle Sam is a hard-hearted, determined to keep his wards from spending their own money and to retain in his own hands every possible dollar of their income, but in order to conserve their resources and to prevent the exploiting of the Indians by unscrupulous whites.

One of the favorite ruses of the latter has been to give the Indians credit for goods of all kinds, from automobiles to player pianos, and then call upon the government to settle the bills. They could show bona fide sale and delivery of the goods and eventually have always been able to collect the money, although the government agents had repeatedly issued orders and requests that sales on credit be stopped. The Act of Congress, however, will put a definite stop to the practice.

Osage Indians and white business men in contact with the reservation of the Osage Nation in Oklahoma are primarily those affected by the law. The Osages are the richest people in the world due to the fact that the richest oil producing field in the United States is located on their tribal lands. Last year each enrolled Osage received from the government approximately $13,200, some families receiving as high as $112,000, derived largely from oil royalties and bonuses.

A per capita income of $13,200 for the 2,229 enrolled Osages adds or multiplies up to a tribal income of almost $30,000,000 for the year. It means, also, that each Osage is worth at least $250,000. That is to say, each has an income that is five per cent on more than a quarter of a million. The family income depends, of course, upon the number of members of the family who were placed on the enrolled list at the time the allotment was established.

Vast Quantities of Oil.

During the year 33,662,179 barrels of oil were produced in the Osage Reservation, upon which the Indians received one-fifth and one-sixth royalties required under the terms of the leases, the total royalty income depending upon the amount of oil produced and the price at which it was sold. In addition, the bonuses received for leases sold during the year amounted to $1,758,950, and the deferred bonus payments from previous sales paid in during the year amounted to $13,740,607.

All this money was collected by the government, for when the tribal lands were allotted to the Osages they were given merely the surface of the land. The mineral rights were reserved for the benefit of all the members of the tribe and they share equally in oil royalties and bonuses. This initial precaution no doubt prevented the Indians from being swindled out of their oil wealth, or having it taken from them for a mere fraction of what it has proved to be worth, for they can not dispose of their mineral rights as individuals.

Not all the Ostages are paid their full incomes each year. Only those who have been adjudged competent to administer their own financial affairs handle all the money. Those who are rated incompetent receive allowances of $4,000 each for adults and $2,000 each for children under 18 years of age. Additional allowances are made in emergencies and for travel, especially for anything that may be shown to be for the educational or health betterment of the Indians, subject to the approval of the inspectors and superintendents. Indians who have been declared competent may have their certificates revoked if later it appears that they really are not to be trusted with handling all their own money without supervision. The surplus of the incomes beyond the allowances made and bills paid is accumulated by the government against the day when the oil fails.

The Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes—Choctaws, Cherokees, Creeks, Chickasaws and Seminoles—did not reserve the mineral rights to the tribes when allotments were made, hence some of them have received tremendous sums in oil royalties and bonuses, while others have had only the modest incomes derived from agricultural lands. Some of the Creeks have received as much as $50,000 a year in royalties. Jackson Barnett, a Creek, refused to select an allotment and had to be awarded one arbitrarily. His practically worthless farm land turned out to be one of the richest oil fields in the Creek Nation. In all, 13,532,857 barrels of oil were produced last year on restricted Indian allotments within the Five Civilized Tribes.

Oil has also been discovered in the Pawnee, Otoe, and Kiowa Reservations in Oklahoma; the Crow Reservation in Montana; the Shoshone Reservation in Wyoming, and the Navajo Reservation in New Mexico.

How Credit Has Been Abused.

How the whites have abused the matter of extending credit to Indians may be shown by one or two examples. One Indian youth who had run through thousands of dollars in a very short time recently received newspaper publicity as the owner of nine automobiles. He was not entitled to quite that. What happened was that he bought a car on credit, traded it in for a more expensive car on an additional credit, and repeated that operation until he had nine cars within a brief period, for none of which he had paid and on all of which he owed varying amounts.

Obviously it was not necessary for this Indian to go through transactions of that kind and to that number in order to get an automobile that was sufficient for his needs and in keeping with his financial status. Nine dealers or salesmen, however, got a profit out of the sale of a car to him. A ruling made November 6 backed by the law of 1925 will put a stop to this sort of thing.

In another case, an Indian maiden of 22 years who was not rated as competent and therefore received only $4,000 a year out of her income, ran up bills for clothes and trips during the year that aggregated $8,000.

Indians have at this time approximately $22,000,000 of tribal funds and $34,000,000 of individual funds in the federal treasury and on deposit in 750 banks that pay interest averaging four per cent. In addition, $31,500,000 belonging to individual Indians has been invested in government securities, which are held for safe-keeping by the treasury department, the interest being paid to the Indians semi-annually.

Much has been heard of the exploiting of Indians by whites—the famous transaction in which Indians were traded out of Manhattan Island for $24 worth of rum and beads, for instance—but who has ever heard of Indians exploiting Indians?

Consider, then, this transaction: The wonderfully rich oil lands of the Osages were purchased by the Osages from the Cherokees in 1883 at a price of $1.25 per acre.

At the time of this sale, it is said, the Cherokees thought they had made a fine bargain. Probably the Indians who sold Manhattan Island thought as well of their transaction at the time they made it?

Abe Martin Says--

"Now what have I done t' git on th' sucker list?" said Lafe Bud this mornin' as he opened a weddin' invitation.

Lots o' things are awful high, but I don't believe anything has gone up like th' dime novel, some o' which sell fer $3.

Driving Sense

Detroit, where most of the automobiles are made, ought to know something about driving them. Detroit's latest driving ordinance embodies the result of careful observation and contains some features that deserve the respectful consideration of other communities. For example:

Not more than one sticker is permitted on any car, and it must be not more than 4 by 12 inches and must be placed in the lower, right-hand corner of the windshield. That will leave the glass, all round, fairly free for the driver to see through—which is really what the glass is intended for.

No more than three people are allowed on the front seat of a car, and the driver is not allowed to have anyone, either child or grown-up, sitting on his lap. Furthermore, the driver is forbidden to have one arm out of commission by reason of its being around some other person. To insure further that the driver's attention is not distracted from his main job, it is laid down that no passenger shall have an arm around the driver.

All this is drastic. But it is common sense, and is calculated to promote alike the safety of drivers, passengers and outsiders.

Free British Nations

The British family of nations has now agreed formally that all its individual members are free and equal, with only mutual good will and a figurehead king to do the honors as head of the family.

With good British sense, the committee that has been at work on this matter announces that it is satisfied nothing could be gained by trying to lay down a constitution for the British Empire, consisting as it does of units with different characteristics, different histories and different stages of development. Instead, it simply defines the existing condition of the dominions and states a few principles and recommendations. The first principle is:

"They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, in any respect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British commonwealth of nations."

To this an explanatory comment is added by the committee:

"Every self-governing member of the empire is now master of its destiny. In fact, if not always in form, it is subject to no compulsion whatever."

In carrying on negotiations with other countries, as a matter of courtesy to the members of the family, any member of the commonwealth will keep all the others fully informed and any of them may express an opinion on the subject.

It is a fine forward step and, somehow, typically British. The development has been inevitable and its formal acknowledgment is now made without any fuss or shouting or ever-stressing of its real importance.

The Left-over Gift

If you bought a gift for some one, to be presented during a visit with that person in you own home, and then the visit was cancelled, what would you do with the present?

That is the dilemma one Y. M. C. A. finds itself in because of the hurried conclusion of the Roumanian royal visit to the United States. A "Girl Reserve" bracelet of silver and blue and white enamel was made especially for the Princess Ileana. It was all full of symbolism and very pretty.

But the princess was unable to visit that city, so the trinket is suddenly the subject of a special meeting of association officials.

Right off-hand one wonders why they don't simply forward the gift to the princess with their regrets that she couldn't visit them. But there have been other suggestions which seem to complicate matters. Some people think the bracelet should be kept as a sort of trophy to be worn by specially honored Girl Reserve officers each year. Others think the ungiven gift might well be kept on hand as a lesson on the fickleness of royalty. Or it might be held for the next visiting princess.

The more suggestions are made, the more difficult the problem becomes. Which is a not uncommon situation when democracy tries to hobnob with royalty.

'It would be far more sensible," he says, "to refuse to allow any woman to become a teacher unless she had at least one baby and looked after it properly."

That rule would be hard to apply literally. It might result in a serious shortage of teachers. Yet there can be little doubt that a mother's experience with her own children gives an intelligent woman an understanding of children and knowledge of handling them which is hard to acquire otherwise. The mother who has time and strength to teach other people's children should be peculiarly fitted for the work, if she has also the usual teacher's qualifications.

For, as he very correctly observed, I have spoken of three vegetables and really named but two.

Also, from faraway Australia came another letter, also written by a transplanted Englishman, who writing more in charity than anger, deplored my intelligence of the scope and variety of the vegetable kingdom as found in the British Isles. He cited at least forty different varieties of edible vegetables which, he said were consumed on the tables of his countrymen at home, including such staples as the marrow, the rutabaga, the mangel wurzel, and the scarlet runner bean.

But that is not the main point I was getting at. As a matter of fact, my joke which seemed to have gone widely astray in the colonies was an adaptation of a very old joke. I merely had paraphrased the ancient anecdote of the little girl at school, who, being asked by her teacher to name six animals found in the Arctic region, answered:

"Three walruses and three polar bears."

Not long ago, I mentioned this incident, substantially as I have here recited it in the presence of a distinguished antiquarian, whereupon he told me that for the source of the joke I must hark back several thousand years. The very same story, he said had been used in slightly different form by a Greek fabulist who antedated even Aesop.

I am expecting now to hear that when the archeologists finish exploring the tomb of Tutankhamen they'll unearth a hieroglyphic which, when translated will prove to be a rendition of the same wheeze.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A decided drop in the cost of living in New York is forecast within the next year. This is especially true for those who reside in apartment hotels. The town has been on an apartment hotel building spree for some months.

In almost every mid-town block buildings have been raked down to make way for living quarters. The servant and other problems have relegated house-keeping to the scrap heap of lost arts. Wives have found a surcease from petty worries in this new freedom. It seems the sensible way to live in a big city.

There is no dusting, sweeping, window washing or curtain cleaning to do. A push of an electrical button brings a waiter or maid. Butlers by the hour when company comes are available. Meals are swished up piping hot from well regulated kitchens via the dumb waiter.

And a tenant may lock up the place on a moment's notice and be absent for days with a feeling of security. There are no prying, gossipy neighbors to discuss one's affairs. Mail tubes, taxis and other modern conveniences are at hand.

Until recently an increase of 5,000 apartment hotel rooms a year was a record and during the process of absorption apartment hotels had their problem. Now in one single year the increase has reached the proportions of 30,000 rooms.

These must be filled and it is obvious that to fill them with result in a slash of rentals. The demand is here, but the plain fact is there are not enough persons with salaries adequate to pay the very high rentals.

There are, by the way, very few 13th floors in modern office or hotel buildings. It is a bow to the superstitious and the numbers leap from 12 to 14. Very few will occupy a 13th floor.

It is becoming strictly bourgeoisie to wear formal dress to Saturday night pleasures in Manhattan. The cafes, the theatres and supper clubs are beginning to spot those who wear evening clothes as aliens in a sophisticated herd. All the exclusive haunts ordinarily frowning on informal habiliments consider them proper on this night. It is one evening in the week when patrons may be distinguished from waiters.

An observing pedestrian has observed that the famous twin stone lions in front of the public library are not exact replicas. On each lion the tail is curled toward the steps.

One of the most vivid touches of realism the stage has presented this season is a cabaret "hoofer" solemnly crossing himself in the dressing room before going out to face the ringside mob. They do that in real life.

A cold light on one of those midnight to dawn courtships and marriages was revealed in a telegram from the groom to his intimate friend filed in a lonely village up the Hudson next day. It read: "We got drunk, married and the hebegeebies."

And there is that current story of a certain playwright who went on a protracted bender and awakened in a London hotel without a single remembrance of crossing the ocean. He wired to his club: "In case anyone inquires for me I am not there."

A Broadway simile: "As helpful as a glass eye at a keyhole.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Indians and Their Oil Money.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—On and after December 1, Uncle Sam, through the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Department of the Interior, will cease to be responsible for bills incurred without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, by the Osage Indians, who are his wards.

This measure was not adopted because Uncle Sam is a hard-hearted, determined to keep his wards from spending their own money and to retain in his own hands every possible dollar of their income, but in order to conserve their resources and to prevent the exploiting of the Indians by unscrupulous whites.

One of the favorite ruses of the latter has been to give the Indians credit for goods of all kinds, from automobiles to player pianos, and then call upon the government to settle the bills. They could show bona fide sale and delivery of the goods and eventually have always been able to collect the money, although the government agents had repeatedly issued orders and requests that sales on credit be stopped. The Act of Congress, however, will put a definite stop to the practice.

Osage Indians and white business men in contact with the reservation of the Osage Nation in Oklahoma are primarily those affected by the law. The Osages are the richest people in the world due to the fact that the richest oil producing field in the United States is located on their tribal lands. Last year each enrolled Osage received from the government approximately $13,200, some families receiving as high as $112,000, derived largely from oil royalties and bonuses.

A per capita income of $13,200 for the 2,229 enrolled Osages adds or multiplies up to a tribal income of almost $30,000,000 for the year. It means, also, that each Osage is worth at least $250,000. That is to say, each has an income that is five per cent on more than a quarter of a million. The family income depends, of course, upon the number of members of the family who were placed on the enrolled list at the time the allotment was established.

Vast Quantities of Oil.

During the year 33,662,179 barrels of oil were produced in the Osage Reservation, upon which the Indians received one-fifth and one-sixth royalties required under the terms of the leases, the total royalty income depending upon the amount of oil produced and the price at which it was sold. In addition, the bonuses received for leases sold during the year amounted to $1,758,950, and the deferred bonus payments from previous sales paid in during the year amounted to $13,740,607.

All this money was collected by the government, for when the tribal lands were allotted to the Osages they were given merely the surface of the land. The mineral rights were reserved for the benefit of all the members of the tribe and they share equally in oil royalties and bonuses. This initial precaution no doubt prevented the Indians from being swindled out of their oil wealth, or having it taken from them for a mere fraction of what it has proved to be worth, for they can not dispose of their mineral rights as individuals.

Not all the Ostages are paid their full incomes each year. Only those who have been adjudged competent to administer their own financial affairs handle all the money. Those who are rated incompetent receive allowances of $4,000 each for adults and $2,000 each for children under 18 years of age. Additional allowances are made in emergencies and for travel, especially for anything that may be shown to be for the educational or health betterment of the Indians, subject to the approval of the inspectors and superintendents. Indians who have been declared competent may have their certificates revoked if later it appears that they really are not to be trusted with handling all their own money without supervision. The surplus of the incomes beyond the allowances made and bills paid is accumulated by the government against the day when the oil fails.

The Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes—Choctaws, Cherokees, Creeks, Chickasaws and Seminoles—did not reserve the mineral rights to the tribes when allotments were made, hence some of them have received tremendous sums in oil royalties and bonuses, while others have had only the modest incomes derived from agricultural lands. Some of the Creeks have received as much as $50,000 a year in royalties. Jackson Barnett, a Creek, refused to select an allotment and had to be awarded one arbitrarily. His practically worthless farm land turned out to be one of the richest oil fields in the Creek Nation. In all, 13,532,857 barrels of oil were produced last year on restricted Indian allotments within the Five Civilized Tribes.

Oil has also been discovered in the Pawnee, Otoe, and Kiowa Reservations in Oklahoma; the Crow Reservation in Montana; the Shoshone Reservation in Wyoming, and the Navajo Reservation in New Mexico.

How Credit Has Been Abused.

How the whites have abused the matter of extending credit to Indians may be shown by one or two examples. One Indian youth who had run through thousands of dollars in a very short time recently received newspaper publicity as the owner of nine automobiles. He was not entitled to quite that. What happened was that he bought a car on credit, traded it in for a more expensive car on an additional credit, and repeated that operation until he had nine cars within a brief period, for none of which he had paid and on all of which he owed varying amounts.

Obviously it was not necessary for this Indian to go through transactions of that kind and to that number in order to get an automobile that was sufficient for his needs and in keeping with his financial status. Nine dealers or salesmen, however, got a profit out of the sale of a car to him. A ruling made November 6 backed by the law of 1925 will put a stop to this sort of thing.

In another case, an Indian maiden of 22 years who was not rated as competent and therefore received only $4,000 a year out of her income, ran up bills for clothes and trips during the year that aggregated $8,000.

Indians have at this time approximately $22,000,000 of tribal funds and $34,000,000 of individual funds in the federal treasury and on deposit in 750 banks that pay interest averaging four per cent. In addition, $31,500,000 belonging to individual Indians has been invested in government securities, which are held for safe-keeping by the treasury department, the interest being paid to the Indians semi-annually.

Much has been heard of the exploiting of Indians by whites—the famous transaction in which Indians were traded out of Manhattan Island for $24 worth of rum and beads, for instance—but who has ever heard of Indians exploiting Indians?

Consider, then, this transaction: The wonderfully rich oil lands of the Osages were purchased by the Osages from the Cherokees in 1883 at a price of $1.25 per acre.

At the time of this sale, it is said, the Cherokees thought they had made a fine bargain. Probably the Indians who sold Manhattan Island thought as well of their transaction at the time they made it?

Abe Martin Says--

"Now what have I done t' git on th' sucker list?" said Lafe Bud this mornin' as he opened a weddin' invitation.

Lots o' things are awful high, but I don't believe anything has gone up like th' dime novel, some o' which sell fer $3.

THREE DAY COLDS THREATEN LUNGS

A cough or cold that hangs on after the third day is a threat.

Do something! Don't wait until the cold has run its course—from your head to your throat — from throat to chest or bronchial tubes. Break up your cold before it settles in this "danger zone"; for inflammation spreads, and your bronchial tubes lead directly into your lungs.

Quickly and unfailingly Ayer's Cherry Pectoral goes straight to the seat of trouble. With the very first swallow you feel its comforting warmth. You feel its soothing, healing powers reaching deep down into your bronchial tubes. You feel it penetrating through and through the irritated membranes.

This healing medication, absorbed into the membranes themselves, breaks up the cold, stops the cough, brings prompt and lasting relief.

If you are catching cold; if you have a "head cold"; if your chest is tight; if you have a cough — even if bronchitis has developed — Ayer's Cherry Pectoral at once!

Cherry Pectoral is pleasant, safe and dependable—for children and grown people. At all druggists—60c; twice as much, $1.00. 2a3c

SEAL CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED HERE

Annual Drive is Being Conducted by Chester Woman's Club.

Annual sale of Christmas Health seals opened here last week and will continue until December 25, under the auspices of the Chester Woman's club with Mrs. John Swindell as chairman.

During previous years members of the club conducted a house-to-house canvass and solicited from booths in the bank. This year the drive will be made mostly by school children and only business houses will be solicited.

Members of the club have issued an appeal to the public, requesting a generous response.

MEASLES SET NEW RECORD IN STATE

Measles last year reached a new high record in West Virginia, registering 13,672 cases, or more than one half of all the communicable diseases reported to the division of Preventable Diseases of the State Health Department. This report according to Dr. David Littlejohn, shows that many people are still of the belief that the so-called "children's diseases" are not to be escaped and they, therefore, take no precaution in shielding children from contagion which often proves fatal or undermines the child's health for life.

Doctors are urging the protection of children from all communicable diseases, particularly very young children as the older the child the greater his powers of resistance. The London doctors are advocating the hospitalizing of all cases of measles as this disease in the present severe form is more to be dreaded than scarlet fever. West Virginia death reports also show more deaths from measles than scarlet fever.

It has been discovered that epidemics of measles appear about every three years, and figures now available seem to bear this out. In 1923 there were 10,567 cases of measles reported in West Virginia; 1924, 2,495; 1925, 2,252, and in 1926, 13,672.

WORK PLANNED BY FARM WOMEN

More than two hundred farm women's clubs in West Virginia have set out on a definite plan of work for the next twelve months. A large part of these are undertaking a study of foods including such topics as winter vegetables and their preparation, plans for the vegetable garden and planning the vegetable budget for next year, the canning and storing of vegetables, and the use of vegetables in the diet.

A series of lessons on kitchen improvement is also very popular with the women this year; floors, walls and woodwork; farm home water systems, and kitchen equipment, kinds, use and care. A kitchen improvement contest goes with this series of lessons.

Other lesson series that are being studied include a series on the family, one on citizenship, interior decoration, health and recreation. The study of the family takes up meal service, table service and etiquette, books and reading for the home, home making or housekeeping, and music for the home. The course on citizenship includes a study of state and county officials and their duties, state institutions, work of the state board of children's guardians, and the place of Four-H club work in the community.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

MAN IS KILLED ON LOCOMOTIVE

Run Down by Train Near King's Crossing.

Body of an unidentified man who was struck and killed by Chester-Steubenville passenger train No. 927 near King's crossing Monday afternoon, is being held today at Elliott's morgue, Steubenville.

The victim, who is about 35 years old, is said to have been sitting on the edge of the ties, when the train approached. He failed to heed the warning whistle. The engine struck him a glancing blow, knocking him from the rails and rendering him unconscious.

He was removed to the Ohio Valley hospital, Steubenville, where he died three hours later. Search of the victim's clothing failed to disclose his identity.

Mont J. Daugherty, 50, of Pittsburgh, is in the Gill hospital, Steubenville, suffering internal injuries received when his engine turned over in the yards at Weirton Junction early Tuesday morning. His condition is not serious.

WET-DRY VOTE IN ONTARIO

Government Control of Liquor Issue at Polls.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Dec. 1.—Ontario, voting today for "yes" or "no," on a government control of liquor plan, expects to see the largest vote of any election in the history of the province rolled up.

The six weeks' campaign has been featured by the greatest display of bitterness shown in any election campaign in the province of Ontario in decades. The prohibitionists are counting on the women's vote and the rural element to bring them victory which will mean a tightening up of the Ontario temperance act.

Under the leadership of Premier Howard Ferguson the Conservative party is seeking a return to office on government control of the liquor problem.

One of the feature battle crys of the "drys" throughout the campaign was that if Ontario goes "wet" it will be the "barroom for United States."

A high light of the campaign is the fact that at least three million United States dollars are tied up in real estate contracts bordering along the Ontario-United States frontier. These deals are all on option and have special clauses in them that they will be dropped unless this province votes "wet."

ROSE-MARIE MUSICAL HIT

Hammerstein's Great Success Here on December 7.

"Rose-Marie," which comes to the Ceramic theatre Tuesday, December 7, is one of the greatest musical comedies ever produced.

The superb and melodic score by Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothart is a rare musical treat and a stimulant to the musical student and few who have heard those musical gems of "The Indian Love Call," "Rose-Marie," "The Door of My Dreams" and the stirring march song of the "Mounties" will soon forget these haunting melodies. The gorgeous costumes, the colorful uniforms and the beautiful scenic effects, especially the inspirational mountain scenes of the Canadian "Rockies" are settings that inspire you with their grandeur.

"Rose-Marie," unlike most musical comedies, has a well-told dramatic story that holds interest until the final curtain. The interest is so sustained that it would make a good evening's entertainment even without music. still the play is surcharged with comedy that does not offend or cause one to hold her program in front of her face which is the great reason for the tremendous success of the play.

The glorious voices of the principals that include Ethel Louise Wright, Paul Donah, Grace Wells, Charles Meakins, Peggy Pates, Houston Richards, Frank Harrington, Karyl Kunkel, James Moore, Neil Moore and the chorus send forth in great golden streams the lovely melodies featured in their roles. Aided by the symphony orchestra the players render the richly scored melodies in a manner that you are not likely to have heard in a whole generation of musical plays.

CITY FIGHTS SWANEY SUIT

Re-hearing Asked on Fourth Street Contract.

Application for a re-hearing of the application of Frank Swaney, as a tax-payer, for a permanent injunction against the improvement of Fourth street, was filed in common pleas court at Lisbon yesterday afternoon by City Solicitor Frank Hoover, representing John W. Moore, service-safety director and defendant in the action.

The petition charged that the decision which favored Swaney, was "contrary to the weight of the evidence and contrary to law."

Should a new trial be granted the evidence will be heard by Judge W. F. Lones. The first hearing was conducted before Judge W. H. Spence.

Reichstag Will Give Approval to Reform Of Election System

BERLIN.—Germany is going to reform her election system. It has been found out by almost all parties that is too complicated, extreme, and not democratic, in the ideal sense of the word.

The government has worked out a reform program of the election system which will be submitted to the reichstag for approval. Being a minority government and compelled to lean on the support of either the Socialist or the Nationalist if desiring to have a law passed, the government, therefore, has made it a point not to propose changes involving a change of the constitution, for a law changing the constitution requires a two-third majority of the reichstag.

The government, in its reform program, purpose to abolish the system of "election lists." According to this system mandates were claimed on the principal of "so many votes, so many mandates." One hundred thousand votes polled for a party were required to obtain a seat, regardless of whether the candidate had "carried" his constituency or not. Thus, for instance, it could happen that a party scored, say, half a dozen seats without any of its candidates carrying a single constituency.

The reform program of the government now proposes to return to the old system characterized by "one candidate—one constituency."

Hammerstein's Great Success Here on December 7.

"Rose-Marie," which comes to the Ceramic theatre Tuesday, December 7, is one of the greatest musical comedies ever produced.

The superb and melodic score by Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothart is a rare musical treat and a stimulant to the musical student and few who have heard those musical gems of "The Indian Love Call," "Rose-Marie," "The Door of My Dreams" and the stirring march song of the "Mounties" will soon forget these haunting melodies. The gorgeous costumes, the colorful uniforms and the beautiful scenic effects, especially the inspirational mountain scenes of the Canadian "Rockies" are settings that inspire you with their grandeur.

"Rose-Marie," unlike most musical comedies, has a well-told dramatic story that holds interest until the final curtain. The interest is so sustained that it would make a good evening's entertainment even without music. still the play is surcharged with comedy that does not offend or cause one to hold her program in front of her face which is the great reason for the tremendous success of the play.

The glorious voices of the principals that include Ethel Louise Wright, Paul Donah, Grace Wells, Charles Meakins, Peggy Pates, Houston Richards, Frank Harrington, Karyl Kunkel, James Moore, Neil Moore and the chorus send forth in great golden streams the lovely melodies featured in their roles. Aided by the symphony orchestra the players render the richly scored melodies in a manner that you are not likely to have heard in a whole generation of musical plays.

CITY FIGHTS SWANEY SUIT

Re-hearing Asked on Fourth Street Contract.

Application for a re-hearing of the application of Frank Swaney, as a tax-payer, for a permanent injunction against the improvement of Fourth street, was filed in common pleas court at Lisbon yesterday afternoon by City Solicitor Frank Hoover, representing John W. Moore, service-safety director and defendant in the action.

The petition charged that the decision which favored Swaney, was "contrary to the weight of the evidence and contrary to law."

Should a new trial be granted the evidence will be heard by Judge W. F. Lones. The first hearing was conducted before Judge W. H. Spence.

Reichstag Will Give Approval to Reform Of Election System

BERLIN.—Germany is going to reform her election system. It has been found out by almost all parties that is too complicated, extreme, and not democratic, in the ideal sense of the word.

The government has worked out a reform program of the election system which will be submitted to the reichstag for approval. Being a minority government and compelled to lean on the support of either the Socialist or the Nationalist if desiring to have a law passed, the government, therefore, has made it a point not to propose changes involving a change of the constitution, for a law changing the constitution requires a two-third majority of the reichstag.

The government, in its reform program, purpose to abolish the system of "election lists." According to this system mandates were claimed on the principal of "so many votes, so many mandates." One hundred thousand votes polled for a party were required to obtain a seat, regardless of whether the candidate had "carried" his constituency or not. Thus, for instance, it could happen that a party scored, say, half a dozen seats without any of its candidates carrying a single constituency.

The reform program of the government now proposes to return to the old system characterized by "one candidate—one constituency."

SYNOPSIS.

Julian Reed is wandering southern California in his little roadster. At luncheon in a small restaurant he meets, by chance, a charming, rather wistful young woman. She has missed connections with a troupe of vagabonding actors and he offers to drive her to the troupe's next stopping place, La Jolla. She accepts his offer. She, like Julian, is from the East. They overtake and pass the trucks bearing the rest of the troup. As they stop for dinner, the others come in. Julian meets Watt, the chief of the "Wayside Theatre;" Sadie, an ex-chorus girl, and the rest. Julian comes to the rescue of the troupe financially. Sadie is attracted to him. She tells him how Hester risked everything to try for the leading role in a movie of a play written by "Robert Johns," failed and joined the troupe as a last resort. That night, after the performance, Julian and Hester, in his car, confide in one another and Julian kisses Hester. But next morning, she learns of his financial help to Watt, is angry and will have nothing to do with him. Watt offers him a half interest in the enterprise for $4,000 and he accepts. Then he goes to Hollywood. While there he buys a snappy roadster and new clothes preparatory to interviewing the Interstellar Picture company. In the meantime Watt gives a dinner to the troupe, introducing a new member, a college boy, Joe Maybury. He sits next to Hester at dinner and tells her how he and his friends enjoyed her performance the previous night and wanted to met her. Murry Watt tells the others about Julian buying a half interest in the busines. After dinner Maybury follows Hester. She knows he is much younger than she but hopes he will fall in love with her and restore her faith in herself. The other members of the troupe understand and pity her.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

It would have disturbed Hester to learn how surely she was understood, how her most intimate personel problem was the plainest of facts. And to know that their feeling toward her, their frank appreciation of her fragile gift and their honest friendliness, was tinged with pity would have hurt her deeply. But so it was. They knew that she took life hard, that her fine emotional quality had lingered too long in the bud and now threatened to burst into untimely flower. She felt only a little conspicuous, during these puzzling hours of self-absorption, in taking Joe Maybury down on the beach and then riding all the way to El Centro with him on the tailboard of the light truck. It came naturally enough. The two of them returned to the camp barely in time to find a place there. She had even hesitated about, and suggested squeezing in on the front seat; but the stage manager was in a hurry to get under way and waved her back. All of them acted as usual, good-humoredly and irresponsibly. They didn't joke with her, a significant fact that escaped her notice. So she found herself being lifted up to her seat by Joe Maybury's strong hands. It was what she had wanted. She was smiling now without reason.

She found it delightful there on the tailboard. It was the custom to lay a blanket across and fit in the bedding rolls to form a soft back to the seat. The couple that rode there were hidden from those in front, and as the big truck usually went on ahead, they had the world to themselves. She wholly forgot that she had been known to complain of the sun and heat and the smell of the exhaust just beneath. She curled up like a child and rested her head against a bedding roll and gave herself to the spell of his unflagging youth. The stirring thing was that he so frankly enjoyed being with her. How stirring she needn't and didn't let him know.

By this time he was using her first name as if he had known her for years. "May as well," he remarked in his offhand way the first time he uttered it, "cut off a few days of preliminaries." He took liberties with her, but so easily and casually that she didn't resist.

Toward dusk he grew boyishly serious and made her talk about her work and about acting down East. He had never been in New York, or, for that matter, out of California. And she, who had seldom found it easy to talk personally, let herself go and felt a thrill in the experience.

They stopped for supper, early in the evening, at a mountain inn. The desire to keep him near her was disturbingly strong, and so she moved quickly away and found a place at table between Sadie and Grace Appleby only to sit distrait and silent. She knew that he was disappointed. He even followed a few steps before he caught her purpose, and then dropped down with the crew at another table. It was better; his proper place. But had she driven him away? She hadn't looked ahead. Her thoughts went dark again. After supper she went alone out the door and, as casually as she could, took up a position beside the light truck. Would he come? He did, taking her little elbow again in those strong hands and tossing her up on the seat; and she laughed softly.

One or two of the other merely glanced at them and then went on about their business. Not a word was spoken. But from that moment the whole troupe knew, accepted, indeed, the fact that Hester had at last broken bounds. And their judgment was tempered by that undertone of pity.

A thought disturbing to Hester—it came later as the trucks rolled into El Centro—was that his forwardness might make it difficult for him to accept the discipline of the troupe. In her heart she was already siding hotly with him, even while she sensed and weighed the problem. It was a relief to observe that he pitched in quietly and aptly at the work of unloading and setting up the tents. He knew outdoor life; and he wasn't afraid of work, but went at it with the zest and primitive energy that gave color to everything he did and said. With his coat off and sleeves rolled up, he exhibited the chest and shoulders of a Greek wrestler. Covertly, she watched him as she set up her own cot and unstrapped her blanket roll.

She lay awake that night long after the other girls were asleep. The tent flaps were thrown back and the dry night air of the desert blew across her face. She was curiously unhappy. This sort of thing wouldn't do. She'd simply have to stop it. The real problem lay in what she felt to be her own weakness. Her sleep was broken and troubled with dreams. She awoke at dawn, and lay still, her head pillowed on her arm, mournfully observing Sadie, who lay at the same end of teh tent. Sadie made a lovely picture, her naturally blond bobbed hair fluffed about her face.

Sadies was really a beauty. She had the morals and the disarming friendliness of a half-grown puppy. Indeed, that was her favorite description of herself, "a friendly pup." Big-hearted, was Sadie; never ruffed, apparently never tired, liked by every one. She hadn't a grain of pretense in her happy-go-lucky nature. She had even a sort of character of a sensibleness that was as valuable. She never made trouble; this perhaps because she wasn't selfish. Somehow she drifted along, always sunny and amusing. No one knew what troubles might be hers. And she must have already lived through a great deal. She was sleeping now like a baby.

"Damn this old New England conscience!" though Hester, with a characteristic little twinge at the boldness of the unuttered phrase. "Thing for me is to behave myself. I'm an old fool."

But then, after dressing and quietly greeting the others, she met him by the stage and recklessness returned. She had lost overnight something of the cheery sure atmosphere he gave out, but his friendly grin and the warm touch of his hand on her shoulder brought it instantly back. They walked together to breakfast. And in the afternoon they took a long walk. It happened naturally enough. Or his offhand manner made it seem natural. She perceived now that the others were drawing off. Even Sadie was aloof. The second night there in El Centro was worse than the first. She felt a wreck when she got up in the morning. The hand mirror showed dark rings under her eyes. Sadie must have noticed her appearance from the busy way she chattered about the new hangings that had been ordered for the stage, and the talk of a new and wonderful generator for the lights, and the rows of attentive little Japanese that had been in the audience.

Hester barely heard her. Her nerves were tingling. And after breakfast, with dread in her heart, fighting herself every step of the way, she moved over by the light truck. She wasn't even honest about it, but made a pretense of looking for a last minute something in her suitcase. Then, as if it were a matter of course, he came and lifted her up and they rode away through the desert country with its gridiron of irrigating ditches and its rich yield of food.

FALL-DOHENY DEFENSE SCORES IN ITS COURT INNING

HOGAN, CHIEF COUNSEL, WINS SECOND ROUND IN OIL CASE

Favorable Points in Government Witness' Testimony.

FINNEY'S STORY

Testifies Fall Left Lease Granting to Assistant.

By George E. Durno.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—President Harding was fully advised of the reasons for making the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, oil storage contract with the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, and so informed the senate in a formal message in which he gave his endorsement to the transaction.

This fact was brought out today in the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny, millionaire oil operator, by Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, who introduced into evidence a report to Harding from the interior department, under date of June 3, 1922, and Harding's message to the senate under date of June 7, 1922.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Opening the seventh day of the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, through final cross-examination of a government witness obtained as many points favorable to the defense as Owen Roberts, heading federal counsel, had adduced in the opposite direction yesterday.

The witness was E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior. Through adroit questioning, Hogan conveyed to the jury the picture that Fall had left the whole matter of granting oil leases to Finney: H. Foster Bain, director of the Bureau of Mines; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt; Admiral J. R. Robison, and Secretary of the Navy Denby.

Previously, under direct examination, Roberts, by equally clever questioning, had made it appear that Fall was the guiding genius in the letting of the oil leases to Doheny, which the government contends were tainted with fraud.

Mistrial Denied

the defense he was not under any guard or escort.

"It is also a fact that juror No. 5 was dozing off to sleep when Mrs. Jane Gibson was giving her testimony from a bed in this courtroom."

Reads 12 Affidavits.

Simpson began to read 12 affidavits in which charges of laxity and violation of their sworn duties were made.

One of these affidavits charged that Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain choir singer, had seen, on November 13, juror No. 6, talking to Attorneys McCarter and Studer of the defense and that she also saw this same juror nodding several times.

An affidavit was read signed by Robert Connors, who is a night watchman for the Redfern company of Somerville, which said:

"About 7:15 p. m., on Saturday, November 13, 1926, I was walking along Main street, between Union and Davenport streets, Somerville, N. J. I saw William Force of Cliff street, Somerville, N. J., call one of the jurors on the Hall-Mills case, who was walking with a man I think is a constable. I saw them in conversation for about five minutes and they were still talking when I left. The man who I think is the constable stood about eight or nine feet away from the juror and William Force while they were talking."

Simpson then read an affidavit signed by Robert Lindval, to the effect that this man saw juror No. 2 "nodding and apparently asleep."

Hotel Owner in Court.

Simpson read affidavit after affidavit, making the same charge. In several of the affidavits the witnesses stated that the jurors while eating in a restaurant on Main street were listening to audible comment on the Hall-Mills case made by the public. In court not far from Simpson was Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial hotel, who made the first open charge against the jury. Van Doren several days ago wrote a letter to the court in which he said that the jurors left their doors wide open and that he frequently heard them openly discussing the case. He alleged that they were lax in other ways about the hotel and stated today that three members of the jury are prepared to back him up in his charges.

Van Doren said he was prepared to go on the witness stand and testify.

It was reported this morning that three members of the jury who Van Doren says are willing to back up his statements, are Frank Dunster, foreman of the jury, and Charles V. Skillern and Raymond Young.

"Pretty Bad," Defense Admits.

"Mr. Abe Crim has sworn that he saw one juror sleeping," said Simpson. "Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt has made an affidavit that she saw another juror asleep.

"Robert Connors has sworn that at 7 p. m., November 22, he saw Edward Force, a resident of Somerville, fall in line with Edward Tillman while the jury was walking down Main street after supper."

Force is a son-in-law of Frank Dunster, foreman of the jury.

Simpson mentioned several instances where jurors were seen talking alone to outsiders.

The contention of the defense, it was learned, will be that the affidavits were taken in the last two days, yet pertain to incidents taking place some time ago. They will argue that the prosecution played this card only when it saw that the trial was going against the state.

But the weight of the affidavits did not escape the defense.

"Pretty bad," murmured Senator Chase, aside to his co-workers.

"You're right, it's pretty bad," responded Simpson who overheard Case's remarks.

Newspaper Man on Stand.

After Judge Parker had announced that he would take Simpson's motion for a mistrial under advisement, the jury came back to their seats.

W. Pledge Brown, New York newspaper man, was called. He was asked if he was in an elevator in Brooklyn several months ago with Felix Di Martini, private detective for Mrs. Hall four years ago, and Mrs. Marie Demarest.

(Mrs. Demarest has testified that Di Martini, tried to bribe her for $2,500 if she would "forget that she saw Henry Stevens" in New Brunswick the morning after the murder. Di Martini denied he ever saw or knew Mrs. Demarest.)

"What did Di Martini say," Brown was asked.

"Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Brown was cross-examined by Defense Counsel Clarence Case.

"Are you another New York Mirror man?"

"I am."

Brown was excused.

Rebuttal Testimony.

Captain Harry Walsh was called. He testified, too, that he was in the elevator and that Di Martini said "Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Lieutenant Walter Cicceuch was called and testified to the same effect.

Ray Crim, a Philadelphia newspaper man, testified he was present at Tom's river when Arthur Applegate, a fisherman, made a statement to Simpson to the effect that Applegate could not remember what date Henry Stevens caught the big blue fish.

Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, sister of Mrs. Mills, was recalled and testified that Di Martini told her that he had "seen" Mrs. Jane Gibson. Di Martini had testified that he never went to Mrs. Gibson's home.

At this point the state ended its rebuttal testimony.

Sur-rebuttal Witnesses.

The first sur-rebuttal witness for the defense was Elbridge W. Stain, of Montclair, N. J., a handwriting expert.

He testified he had examined Henry Stevens' diary of 1922 and said the line "At max in aft" was written before the fourth line "one blue 4 lbs." A state witness had testified just the reverse.

Herbert J. Taylor, finger-print expert, was then called and asked concerning alleged superimpositions on the defense's enlarged photographic exhibits. Simpson objected and a long argument ensued.

Taylor was allowed to answer and said there were super-impositions at two points on the enlarged card. He took a pencil and indicated where.

Wilbur E. Rogers, Brooklyn newspaper reporter, was called and testified he was in the elevator in Brooklyn when Mrs. Demarest and Di Martini met.

He did not hear Di Martini say, "Hello," Mrs. Demarest," he said.

Raymond Daniels, New York City reporter, also was in the elevator and did not hear Di Martini address Mrs. Demarest. He said he was now listening.

The defense then rested at 12:02 p. m.

All the evidence in the case was in at 12:02 this afternoon when the defense finished with its sur-rebuttal witnesses.

Jury Excused Until 1:30.

Immediately the evidence was in, Justice Parker ordered that the jury be excused until 1:30 this afternoon. Simpson then read the affidavit from Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial hotel where the jury is quartered, to the effect that the jury had been openly discussing the case, that some members of the jury indicated they did not believe the testimony of Mrs. James Gibson and that in Van Doren's opinion they had a preconceived opinion regarding the verdict.

Simpson spoke at length on his motion for a mistrial. "There will be more chance of a fair verdict before twelve trees than before these twelve men from Somerset county," said Simpson," "because in the course of time the trees would blossom forth but the minds of the twelve men here never will."

Meat Dealers See Eve at "High Price, Cheap Cuts" Meet

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 1.—Six hundred members of the Retail Meat Dealers' association told their wives they were going to a meeting to learn new wrinkles about getting higher prices for the cheaper cuts, and so forth.

At the Eagles' hall, after the business was disposed of, two girls appeared on the platform, and began to dance. It was warm in the hall, and the girls began shedding their sparse drapery.

Finally, at the height of a fast Charleston, they got down to essentials, and the cheers rose louder and louder.

Then a police captain and ten coppers butted in and pinched the house.

The butchers were detained half an hour, but later permitted to go home, while the two girls and the charman of the program committee were booked for participating in and promoting an indecent exposition.

'PRODIGAL SON' EVANGELIST'S SERMON TOPIC

Rev. O. A. Newlin in United Presbyterian Pulpit.

SPECIAL MUSIC

"Most Prevalent Sin" Subject for Tonight's Services.

"Preaching what he characterized as three sermons in one" Rev. O. A. Newlin, Winona Lake, Ind., evangelist, held a large audience enthralled at the First United Presbyterian church last evening by a unique and singularly analytical presentation of the promptings, experiences and accomplishments of the so-called "Prodigal Son." His subject was "The Pearl of Parables."

By stories replete with humor and wholesome comparison to present day conditions, he erected a finding from the whole that only in Jesus Christ may earth peace be found and heavenly salvation attained.

Preceding his discourse he gave another of his Bible readings on the fifteenth chapter of Luke.

The invocation was made by Rev. Mr. Walker, pastor of the Emmanuel Presbyterian church. Prof. John C Ussher, following the direction of an inspiring song service, sang, "How Precious Thy Thoughts Are to Me."

The subject of Rev. Mr. Newlin's for tonight, it was announced, will be: "The Most Prevalent Sin."

Rev. L. J. Davison, the church's pastor, called attention to the fact that many members of the congregation had not as yet attended the series of meetings that are in progress. "It is our first duty to be present ourselves before essaying to bringing the public to this revival," he said. "These preliminary Bible readings of Rev. Mr. Newlin are alone worth a service without considering the outstanding sermon that follows." He accordingly urged that all the denomination devotees permit nothing to keep them away from the subsequent gatherings which the evangelist will address.

Rev. Mr. Newlin, at the outset of his discourse, affirmed his pleasure at the courtesy of visits to the revival of pastors of other churches in the city. "Though I know they are unusually busy," he said, "it is a joy to have them attend. I am reminded of the testimony of a certain layman at a return visit to a series of meetings I once held. He told of his regret at seeing the meetings close and the consequent necessity of a return to what he called the 'ordinary preaching' of the pastor, but to his surprise he found that his minister spoke thereafter as he never previously had done; and that also a preacher who had not attended the meeting and whom he always had held as a 'weak speaker' thereafter was a forcible talker. Soon the opinion was reached that the change noted in both instances was in the spiritual metamorphosis that had come to him.

"When we cultivate the religious habit our spiritual appetites will be increased. Hence every ordinary food will taste good to us and do us more good than that which false appetites demand.

"I am a firm believer that God's word will not return void. Once as a revival was being concluded without a convert I announced one more song. During it a leading physician and his wife made a public confession for Jesus Christ, and 42 more persons followed them."

Rev. Mr. Newlin deprecated the changed duty of church clocks as he began his duty. "They used to be placed outside 200 years ago to indicate the time services should begin," he explained. "Now they are hung prominently inside so as to tell when meetings shall conclude."

Rev. Mr. Newlin averred that for the most part an erroneous idea was attached to the Prodigal Son. "The word 'prodigal' is not mentioned in any Scripture reference to him," he said. "He is simply the younger son and a type of all persons who are away from God. Many think they are not as bad as he when the truth is they often are much worse.

"Nine things are mentioned about this younger brother and one of these that 'he wasted his substance with harlots' was by his elder brother, who, biased, could hardly have given a 100 per cent estimate of him. The other eight were by Jesus himself. They form as it were planks to the porch that enter into his father's house."

The evangelist then commented in turn upon these in which for the greater part he held the young lad as showing no bad qualities.

"The first of these he held to be his request of his father: "Give me the portion of goods that will fall to me." "He held this to be but a natural demand. "All sometime get something from our fathers even though it be a very small token. He simply asked his share; he did not speak for the older brother's blessing. He simply would accept his own responsibility and elected to build up his own life.

The second of these was that "not many days after he went away." He did not slip out between two days; he left not in anger; he doubtless had his relatives see him off. There was nothing wrong in that. If you do not leave your parental home sometime it will leave you.

"Then as the third plank he went to a far country. That is not a sin. Horace Greely advised people to go west. Our parents pioneered this country; they sinned not. Neither did this young man by the fact he went far away.

"But in the fourth thing said of him he exhibited a rotten plank for this porch for "he wasted his substance with riotous living." But did he squander more than young people do today. You hear much of the high cost of living but what of the high cost of loving? How much do you pay to satisfy the sweet taste of your boy's sweetheart?

"Then in the fifth statement of him he 'joined himself to a herdsman.' He got himself a job. He did not hold up banks or filling stations. That was fine of him.

"He then 'came to himself.' Oonce a man is working he thinks properly.

"The he resolved to go home. 'I will arise and go to my father and tell him I have sinned against him and heaven. He did this.

"He then arose and came to his father's but he never got to the statement: 'Make me as one of the hired servants for his father embraced him and started the details of the feast.

"So comes the three sermons in one. The young man was first sick of home; then homesick and finally home to stick. Amen! That is the first sermon.

In the second sermon there was badness in his life. He caviled with his father, traveled to a far country and reveled in wasting. Then there was sadness that came to him. He went to the dogs, ate with hogs and lost his togs. But finally there came gladness to him. He ate the feast, his hunger ceased and his joy increased. Amen! That is the second sermon.

"The third sermon found him feasting with worldly sins. Nothing satisfied him. Then there came fasting. The difference between feasting and fasting is that the devil takes the letter 'e' from feast. But finally there was feasting again. Jesus put back the letter 'e' in fasting when the young man came to himself and returned to his father."

A department store in Adelaide, Australia, soon wil erect an eight-story office building, costing $1,250,000.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—All sections of the stock market participated in a moderate rally in prices at the beginning of trading today. An over-crowded short position in some of the industrial and specialty stocks competed for the offerings of stocks, according to bullish quarters.

BAN SILENCING OF U. S. RADIO STATIONS FOR FOREIGN CALLS

International Week Committee Frowns on Suggestion.

ONE TEST FAILS

Both American and European Broadcasters Protest.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The silencing of American radio stations for international broadcasting was definitely banned today by the international radio week committee.

Opposition of both American and European broadcasters to remaining silent on alternate nights, while millions of listeners hug loudspeakers or ear-phones to hear little but cat calls and other ether howls was responsible for the decision.

L. A. Nixon, secretary of the committee, declared the results of the 1926 international broadcast, held last January, "while interesting were not worth the loss of programs from American stations.

"Last January's test will be the last international broadcast sponsored by the committee," Nixon said.

Many reasons have been assigned to the lack of results obtained from the January tests, which took place at a time when radio reception was unusually poor due to atmosphere conditions.

Thousands of Receivers Idle.

Even Secretary of Commerce Hoover, an ardent listener, equipped with a powerful set, reported little better luck than operators of crude home-made receivers.

The International radio week committee for the past two years has arranged that American and European stations remain silent at stated periods that trans-Atlantic programs might be picked up without interference. Many protests were received on the grounds that the average listener would prefer to get good reception from hearer stations, rather than nothing from abroad.

"Thousands of listeners reported fragmentary reception of overseas programs, but many hundreds of thousands failed to hear any programs at all," Nixon said.

"Thousands of radio receivers were idle on the evenings of radio week, when if ever, they should have been in operation."

Reports obtained by the committee from American and overseas stations indicated that the broadcasters were not in sympathy with the movement, while listeners and members of the radio trade were divided.

MID-WEST HIT BY BLIZZARD

Deer Hunters, Trappers and Novelist Curwood Snowbound.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The middle west was struck today by the forerunner of the blizzard and cold wave which has blanketed northern Michigan and Wisconsin.

A biting northerly wind, carrying with it a light snow, drove the mercury down at the rate of two degrees an hour from midnight when the thermometer registered 41. Forecast for tonight was a probable minimum of 15, which will be the lowest this year.

Extremely low temperatures and heavy snows were reported today in North Dakota and the upper Michigan peninsula.

Hundreds of deer hunters and trappers were reported snowbound with roads and trails covered by five foot drifts in the Calumet and Marquette districts of upper Michigan.

James Oliver Curwood, the novelist, was snowbound at his camp 60 miles from Calumet.

Coast guards on Lake Superior watched for lake, vessels, fearing wrecks because of the high winds.

SUNDAY BLUE LAW CAMPAIGN IN OHIO HIT

Elyria Mayor Says He Will Combat Movement.

THEATRES TARGET

Two Women Leaders of State-wide Crusade.

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 1.—The "Statewide" campaign to enforce Sunday Blue Laws, died in its inception here today when the Lorain county grand jury recessed without taking action against the proprietors of theatres which have operated on Sundays.

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 1.—The movement to launch a state-wide campaign for enforcement of Sunday blue laws in Ohio cities received a devastating blow here today when Mayor Harry Hinkson announced that he would combat the plan.

"Even if Sunday moving picture theaters are closed," he declared, "I shall use every effort to keep filling stations and other essential industries open."

The mayor's action followed announcement yesterday by Emma Vosburgh and Anna Reynolds, that after they had been instrumental in closing local theaters they would carry their campaign to Cleveland, Columbus, Toledo, Akron and other cities.

The two women admitted that they are acting independently of any organization in their efforts to close theaters here. They have testified before the grand jury and a decision is expected late today, in the case of John Pekras, proprietor of a cinema, whom they singled out for their initial attack.

DEATH ROLL

FALL-DOHENY DEFENSE SCORES IN ITS COURT INNING

HOGAN, CHIEF COUNSEL, WINS SECOND ROUND IN OIL CASE

Favorable Points in Government Witness' Testimony.

Testifies Fall Left Lease Granting to Assistant.

By George E. Durno.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—President Harding was fully advised of the reasons for making the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, oil storage contract with the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, and so informed the senate in a formal message in which he gave his endorsement to the transaction.

This fact was brought out today in the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny, millionaire oil operator, by Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, who introduced into evidence a report to Harding from the interior department, under date of June 3, 1922, and Harding's message to the senate under date of June 7, 1922.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Opening the seventh day of the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, through final cross-examination of a government witness obtained as many points favorable to the defense as Owen Roberts, heading federal counsel, had adduced in the opposite direction yesterday.

The witness was E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior. Through adroit questioning, Hogan conveyed to the jury the picture that Fall had left the whole matter of granting oil leases to Finney: H. Foster Bain, director of the Bureau of Mines; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt; Admiral J. R. Robison, and Secretary of the Navy Denby.

Previously, under direct examination, Roberts, by equally clever questioning, had made it appear that Fall was the guiding genius in the letting of the oil leases to Doheny, which the government contends were tainted with fraud.

Mistrial Denied

the defense he was not under any guard or escort.

"It is also a fact that juror No. 5 was dozing off to sleep when Mrs. Jane Gibson was giving her testimony from a bed in this courtroom."

Reads 12 Affidavits.

Simpson began to read 12 affidavits in which charges of laxity and violation of their sworn duties were made.

One of these affidavits charged that Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain choir singer, had seen, on November 13, juror No. 6, talking to Attorneys McCarter and Studer of the defense and that she also saw this same juror nodding several times.

An affidavit was read signed by Robert Connors, who is a night watchman for the Redfern company of Somerville, which said:

"About 7:15 p. m., on Saturday, November 13, 1926, I was walking along Main street, between Union and Davenport streets, Somerville, N. J. I saw William Force of Cliff street, Somerville, N. J., call one of the jurors on the Hall-Mills case, who was walking with a man I think is a constable. I saw them in conversation for about five minutes and they were still talking when I left. The man who I think is the constable stood about eight or nine feet away from the juror and William Force while they were talking."

Simpson then read an affidavit signed by Robert Lindval, to the effect that this man saw juror No. 2 "nodding and apparently asleep."

Hotel Owner in Court.

Simpson read affidavit after affidavit, making the same charge. In several of the affidavits the witnesses stated that the jurors while eating in a restaurant on Main street were listening to audible comment on the Hall-Mills case made by the public. In court not far from Simpson was Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial hotel, who made the first open charge against the jury. Van Doren several days ago wrote a letter to the court in which he said that the jurors left their doors wide open and that he frequently heard them openly discussing the case. He alleged that they were lax in other ways about the hotel and stated today that three members of the jury are prepared to back him up in his charges.

Van Doren said he was prepared to go on the witness stand and testify.

It was reported this morning that three members of the jury who Van Doren says are willing to back up his statements, are Frank Dunster, foreman of the jury, and Charles V. Skillern and Raymond Young.

"Pretty Bad," Defense Admits.

"Mr. Abe Crim has sworn that he saw one juror sleeping," said Simpson. "Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt has made an affidavit that she saw another juror asleep.

"Robert Connors has sworn that at 7 p. m., November 22, he saw Edward Force, a resident of Somerville, fall in line with Edward Tillman while the jury was walking down Main street after supper."

Force is a son-in-law of Frank Dunster, foreman of the jury.

Simpson mentioned several instances where jurors were seen talking alone to outsiders.

The contention of the defense, it was learned, will be that the affidavits were taken in the last two days, yet pertain to incidents taking place some time ago. They will argue that the prosecution played this card only when it saw that the trial was going against the state.

But the weight of the affidavits did not escape the defense.

"Pretty bad," murmured Senator Chase, aside to his co-workers.

"You're right, it's pretty bad," responded Simpson who overheard Case's remarks.

Newspaper Man on Stand.

After Judge Parker had announced that he would take Simpson's motion for a mistrial under advisement, the jury came back to their seats.

W. Pledge Brown, New York newspaper man, was called. He was asked if he was in an elevator in Brooklyn several months ago with Felix Di Martini, private detective for Mrs. Hall four years ago, and Mrs. Marie Demarest.

(Mrs. Demarest has testified that Di Martini, tried to bribe her for $2,500 if she would "forget that she saw Henry Stevens" in New Brunswick the morning after the murder. Di Martini denied he ever saw or knew Mrs. Demarest.)

"What did Di Martini say," Brown was asked.

"Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Brown was cross-examined by Defense Counsel Clarence Case.

"Are you another New York Mirror man?"

"I am."

Brown was excused.

Rebuttal Testimony.

Captain Harry Walsh was called. He testified, too, that he was in the elevator and that Di Martini said "Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Lieutenant Walter Cicceuch was called and testified to the same effect.

Ray Crim, a Philadelphia newspaper man, testified he was present at Tom's river when Arthur Applegate, a fisherman, made a statement to Simpson to the effect that Applegate could not remember what date Henry Stevens caught the big blue fish.

Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, sister of Mrs. Mills, was recalled and testified that Di Martini told her that he had "seen" Mrs. Jane Gibson. Di Martini had testified that he never went to Mrs. Gibson's home.

At this point the state ended its rebuttal testimony.

Sur-rebuttal Witnesses.

The first sur-rebuttal witness for the defense was Elbridge W. Stain, of Montclair, N. J., a handwriting expert.

He testified he had examined Henry Stevens' diary of 1922 and said the line "At max in aft" was written before the fourth line "one blue 4 lbs." A state witness had testified just the reverse.

Herbert J. Taylor, finger-print expert, was then called and asked concerning alleged superimpositions on the defense's enlarged photographic exhibits. Simpson objected and a long argument ensued.

Taylor was allowed to answer and said there were super-impositions at two points on the enlarged card. He took a pencil and indicated where.

Wilbur E. Rogers, Brooklyn newspaper reporter, was called and testified he was in the elevator in Brooklyn when Mrs. Demarest and Di Martini met.

He did not hear Di Martini say, "Hello," Mrs. Demarest," he said.

Raymond Daniels, New York City reporter, also was in the elevator and did not hear Di Martini address Mrs. Demarest. He said he was now listening.

The defense then rested at 12:02 p. m.

All the evidence in the case was in at 12:02 this afternoon when the defense finished with its sur-rebuttal witnesses.

Jury Excused Until 1:30.

Immediately the evidence was in, Justice Parker ordered that the jury be excused until 1:30 this afternoon. Simpson then read the affidavit from Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial hotel where the jury is quartered, to the effect that the jury had been openly discussing the case, that some members of the jury indicated they did not believe the testimony of Mrs. James Gibson and that in Van Doren's opinion they had a preconceived opinion regarding the verdict.

Simpson spoke at length on his motion for a mistrial. "There will be more chance of a fair verdict before twelve trees than before these twelve men from Somerset county," said Simpson," "because in the course of time the trees would blossom forth, but the minds of the twelve men here never will."

Meat Dealers See Eve at "High Price, Cheap Cuts" Meet

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 1.—Six hundred members of the Retail Meat Dealers' association told their wives they were going to a meeting to learn new wrinkles about getting higher prices for the cheaper cuts, and so forth.

At the Eagles' hall, after the business was disposed of, two girls appeared on the platform, and began to dance. It was warm in the hall, and the girls began shedding their sparse drapery.

Finally, at the height of a fast Charleston, they got down to essentials, and the cheers rose louder and louder.

Then a police captain and ten coppers butted in and pinched the house.

The butchers were detained half an hour, but later permitted to go home, while the two girls and the charman of the program committee were booked for participating in and promoting an indecent exposition.

'PRODIGAL SON' EVANGELIST'S SERMON TOPIC

Rev. O. A. Newlin in United Presbyterian Pulpit.

SPECIAL MUSIC

"Most Prevalent Sin" Subject for Tonight's Services.

"Preaching what he characterized as three sermons in one" Rev. O. A. Newlin, Winona Lake, Ind., evangelist, held a large audience enthralled at the First United Presbyterian church last evening by a unique and singularly analytical presentation of the promptings, experiences and accomplishments of the so-called "Prodigal Son." His subject was "The Pearl of Parables."

By stories replete with humor and wholesome comparison to present day conditions, he erected a finding from the whole that only in Jesus Christ may earth peace be found and heavenly salvation attained.

Preceding his discourse he gave another of his Bible readings on the fifteenth chapter of Luke.

The invocation was made by Rev. Mr. Walker, pastor of the Emmanuel Presbyterian church. Prof. John C Ussher, following the direction of an inspiring song service, sang, "How Precious Thy Thoughts Are to Me."

The subject of Rev. Mr. Newlin's for tonight, it was announced, will be: "The Most Prevalent Sin."

Rev. L. J. Davison, the church's pastor, called attention to the fact that many members of the congregation had not as yet attended the series of meetings that are in progress. "It is our first duty to be present ourselves before essaying to bringing the public to this revival," he said. "These preliminary Bible readings of Rev. Mr. Newlin are alone worth a service without considering the outstanding sermon that follows." He accordingly urged that all the denomination devotees permit nothing to keep them away from the subsequent gatherings which the evangelist will address.

Rev. Mr. Newlin, at the outset of his discourse, affirmed his pleasure at the courtesy of visits to the revival of pastors of other churches in the city. "Though I know they are unusually busy," he said, "it is a joy to have them attend. I am reminded of the testimony of a certain layman at a return visit to a series of meetings I once held. He told of his regret at seeing the meetings close and the consequent necessity of a return to what he called the 'ordinary preaching' of the pastor, but to his surprise he found that his minister spoke thereafter as he never previously had done; and that also a preacher who had not attended the meeting and whom he always had held as a 'weak speaker' thereafter was a forcible talker. Soon the opinion was reached that the change noted in both instances was in the spiritual metamorphosis that had come to him.

"When we cultivate the religious habit our spiritual appetites will be increased. Hence every ordinary food will taste good to us and do us more good than that which false appetites demand.

"I am a firm believer that God's word will not return void. Once as a revival was being concluded without a convert I announced one more song. During it a leading physician and his wife made a public confession for Jesus Christ, and 42 more persons followed them."

Rev. Mr. Newlin deprecated the changed duty of church clocks as he began his duty. "They used to be placed outside 200 years ago to indicate the time services should begin," he explained. "Now they are hung prominently inside so as to tell when meetings shall conclude."

Rev. Mr. Newlin averred that for the most part an erroneous idea was attached to the Prodigal Son. "The word 'prodigal' is not mentioned in any Scripture reference to him," he said. "He is simply the younger son and a type of all persons who are away from God. Many think they are not as bad as he when the truth is they often are much worse.

"Nine things are mentioned about 'his younger brother and one of these that 'he wasted his substance with harlots' was by his elder brother, who, biased, could hardly have given a 100 per cent estimate of him. The other eight were by Jesus himself. They form as it were planks to the porch that enter into his father's house."

The evangelist then commented in turn upon these in which for the greater part he held the young lad as showing no bad qualities.

"The first of these he held to be his request of his father: "Give me the portion of goods that will fall to me." "He held this to be but a natural demand "All sometime get something from our fathers even though it be a very small token. He simply asked his share; he did not speak for the older brother's blessing. He simply would accept his own responsibility and elected to build up his own life.

The second of these was that "not many days after he went away." He did not slip out between two days; he left not in anger; he doubtless had his relatives see him off. There was nothing wrong in that. If you do not leave your parental home sometime it will leave you.

"Then as the third plank he went to a far country. That is not a sin. Horace Greely advised people to go west. Our parents pioneered this country; they sinned not. Neither did this young man by the fact he went far away.

"But in the fourth thing said of him he exhibited a rotten plank for this porch for "he wasted his substance with riotous living." But did he squander more than young people do today. You hear much of the high cost of living but what of the high cost of loving? How much do you pay to satisfy the sweet taste of your boy's sweetheart?

"Then in the fifth statement of him he 'joined himself to a herdsman.' He got himself a job. He did not hold up banks or filling stations. That was fine of him.

"He then 'came to himself.' Oonce a man is working he thinks properly.

"The he resolved to go home. 'I will arise and go to my father and tell him I have sinned against him and heaven. He did this.

"He then arose and came to his father's but he never got to the statement: 'Make me as one of the hired servants for his father embraced him and started the details of the feast.

"So comes the three sermons in one. The young man was first sick of home; then homesick and finally home to stick. Amen! That is the first sermon.

In the second sermon there was badness in his life. He caviled with his father, traveled to a far country and reveled in wasting. Then there was sadness that came to him. He went to the dogs, ate with hogs and lost his togs. But finally there came gladness to him. He ate the feast, his hunger ceased and his joy increased. Amen! That is the second sermon.

"The third sermon found him feasting with worldly sins. Nothing satisfied him. Then there came fasting. The difference between feasting and fasting is that the devil takes the letter 'e' from feast. But finally there was feasting again. Jesus put back the letter 'e' in fasting when the young man came to himself and returned to his father."

BAN SILENCING OF U. S. RADIO STATIONS FOR FOREIGN CALLS

International Week Committee Frowns on Suggestion.

ONE TEST FAILS

Both American and European Broadcasters Protest.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The silencing of American radio stations for international broadcasting was definitely banned today by the international radio week committee.

Opposition of both American and European broadcasters to remaining silent on alternate nights, while millions of listeners hug loudspeakers or ear-phones to hear little but cat calls and other ether howls was responsible for the decision.

L. A. Nixon, secretary of the committee, declared the results of the 1926 international broadcast, held last January, "while interesting were not worth the loss of programs from American stations.

"Last January's test will be the last international broadcast sponsored by the committee," Nixon said.

Many reasons have been assigned to the lack of results obtained from the January tests, which took place at a time when radio reception was unusually poor due to atmosphere conditions.

Thousands of Receivers Idle.

Even Secretary of Commerce Hoover, an ardent listener, equipped with a powerful set, reported little better luck than operators of crude home-made receivers.

The International radio week committee for the past two years has arranged that American and European stations remain silent at stated periods that trans-Atlantic programs might be picked up without interference. Many protests were received on the grounds that the average listener would prefer to get good reception from nearer stations, rather than nothing from abroad.

"Thousands of listeners reported fragmentary reception of overseas programs, but many hundreds of thousands failed to hear any programs at all," Nixon said.

"Thousands of radio receivers were idle on the evenings of radio week, when if ever, they should have been in operation."

Reports obtained by the committee from American and overseas stations indicated that the broadcasters were not in sympathy with the movement, while listeners and members of the radio trade were divided.

MID-WEST HIT BY BLIZZARD

Deer Hunters, Trappers and Novelist Curwood Snowbound.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The middle west was struck today by the forerunner of the blizzard and cold wave which has blanketed northern Michigan and Wisconsin.

A biting northerly wind, carrying with it a light snow, drove the mercury down at the rate of two degrees an hour from midnight when the thermometer registered 41. Forecast for tonight was a probable minimum of 15, which will be the lowest this year.

Extremely low temperatures and heavy snows were reported today in North Dakota and the upper Michigan peninsula.

Hundreds of deer hunters and trappers were reported snowbound with roads and trails covered by five foot drifts in the Calumet and Marquette districts of upper Michigan.

James Oliver Curwood, the novelist, was snowbound at his camp 60 miles from Calumet.

Coast guards on Lake Superior watched for lake, vessels, fearing wrecks because of the high winds.

SUNDAY BLUE LAW CAMPAIGN IN OHIO HIT

Elyria Mayor Says He Will Combat Movement.

THEATRES TARGET

Two Women Leaders of State-wide Crusade.

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 1.—The "Statewide" campaign to enforce Sunday Blue Laws, died in its inception here today when the Lorain county grand jury recessed without taking action against the proprietors of theatres which have operated on Sundays.

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 1.—The movement to launch a state-wide campaign for enforcement of Sunday blue laws in Ohio cities received a devastating blow here today when Mayor Harry Hinkson announced that he would combat the plan.

"Even if Sunday moving picture theaters are closed," he declared, "I shall use every effort to keep filling stations and other essential industries open."

The mayor's action followed announcement yesterday by Emma Vosburgh and Anna Reynolds, that after they had been instrumental in closing local theaters they would carry their campaign to Cleveland, Columbus, Toledo, Akron and other cities.

The two women admitted that they are acting independently of any organization in their efforts to close theaters here. They have testified before the grand jury and a decision is expected late today, in the case of John Pekras, proprietor of a cinema, whom they singled out for their initial attack.

DECEMBER 20 DATE

Thirteen Wellsville Citizens Among Those Summoned.

Eight are Injured When Pennsy Train Is Hit at Gould's

Eight persons were injured when Pennsylvania passenger train No. 206, St. Louis to New York, was sideswiped at Gould's Tunnel, six miles west of Steubenville, last night.

The locomotive of the passenger train, which was eastbound, had just emerged from the tunnel when two passenger cars yet in the tunnel were side-swiped by a bulging merchandise car of a freight train west-bound. The sides of the two cars were badly damaged.

Physicians from Steubenville were summoned and hurried to the scene to administer first aid to the injured. The victims, none of whom was believed seriously hurt, were all through passengers from St. Louis. After being treated, the injured, along with other passengers, some of whom were frightened, were transferred to another train, also from St. Louis, enroute to New York, which arrived about 10 minutes after the accident, and continued toward Pittsburgh.

The train was crowded at the time and the engineer succeeded in bringing the train to a halt shortly after he heard the crash, probably averting a life toll. Parts of the two passenger cars were torn away.

That an education is the primary purpose of every student whether he is an athlete or not, was the substance of the message conveyed to Wellsville Kiwanians and their guests, the members of the local high school football team, at the club's noon luncheon meeting yesterday in the First Presbyterian church by "Bo" McMillin, former Centre college star and coach at Geneva college.

Approximately 72 were present at the luncheon, incuding George Bell, high school principal; Coach Earl Klinck, and Faculty Manager Robert Trumbull.

"Any student who believes that the attainment of athletic laurels is of the first importance is 'kidding' himself.

McMillin asserted that any coach is a "dirty cur" who asks his boys to work hard for him to the exclusion of other matters of greater importance and then have them awaken some day and find they have nothing. They become athletics tramps, he said.

Speaking of the "stars" whose names flash in the headlines, McMillin declared that they shouldn't forget that their teamates made them stars.

Each members of the local school team was introduced by Coach Klinck.

George Kouvalis, East Liverpool restaurant proprietor, and his brother, John, arrested by Chief of Police John Fultz, charged with attempts to threaten Attorney W. A. O'Grady, of this city, were released last night following questioning in the police court when the local lawyer asserted it was not his desire to press charges.

Attorney O'Grady had previously entered suit against Kouvalis for fees in a case in which he had been retained by the latter. He received this letter: "The blackhand and the secret justice has the honor to make the following demand on you: to withdraw your unjust claim filed in court against your former client and give strong reason why you failed to represent him properly for the amount you have received from him. A failure on your part to comply with this order, the blackhand will take its course to the limit." The letter was mailed from Steubenville.

"Mother-Daughter" Night Scheduled at Evangelical Church

"Mother and Daughter" night will be observed at services this evening in the First Evangelical church in connection with the revival meetings being conducted by Rev. H. A. Frye.

Rev. Frye will speak on the subject, "What it Means to Be a Christian and How We May Know."

Rev. Frye last night discussed "The High Peak of Christian Experience." Quoting Hebrews 7-25, he said "Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them."

"There are preachers who say there is no such thing as an experience and that you cannot know when you are haved. One thing is sure that if you cannot know when you are saved, you could lose it and not know it.

"One man said 'It a man can know that he is serving the devil, a man can know if he is serving God.'

"When man fell from his state of holiness, he fell to the depths of sin, but the religion of Jesus Christ reaches down to the lowest depths of sin and pollution and lifts men up to the plains of justification and heart purity.

"The individual who has gotten a pikes peak experience in God's grace does not want to go down, for he is satisfied.

"There are some who teach the doctrine. 'Once in grace always in grace,' but Bud Robinson said that all depends as to what kind of grace you are in. Some are in God's grace and such may fall, but some are in disgrace and such are always in disgrace. They are always down and a man cannot fall down when he is already down.

"The forgiveness of sin and the sanctification of my soul is all included in the text. And a good case of regeneration will make you hungry for the experience of entire sanctification.

"The power to forgive sin is not delegated to any human being. Jesus Christ made the plunge into the abyss of sin, and there are no hopeless cases with him. The blood of Jesus Christ is able to wash us whiter than snow.

"Someone may say 'preacher,' do you mean to say that you are preaching that a man can live without sin?' Absolutely; Read I John 3:8. He that committeth sin is of the devil, for he sinneth from the beginning.' For this purpose the son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. The next verse proves that He was successful. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin. For his seed remaineth in him and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. Any man who says that we cannot live without sin, trys to prove that Jesus Christ has failed, and that he has not succeeded in destroying the works of the Devil."

Three national leaders in the Disciple church will take part in the meeting in January, these being W. R. Warren, editor of the World Call, of St. Louis; Jesse M. CASE APPEALED TO CIRCUIT COURT

An appeal to the circuit court will be taken by John H. Hinchliffe, owner of the Lisbon opera house, in the case filed against him by Samuel Moranz, owner of the Grand theatre, Lisbon. The court has set the appeal bond at $2,000.

In this action Hinchliffe, it is declared, agreed to lease the opera house to Moranz upon the receipt of a hand payment and for a stipulated annual rental, and also with the further stipulation that Moranz could have an option upon the purchase of the property.

Hinchlife, it is alleged, failed to turn the property over to Moranz as provided, and then Moranz went into common pleas court seeking an order whereby he would be given charge of the opera house.

The case was heard before Judge W. H. Spence, who before retiring from the bench Monday made an order that Hinchliffe turn the property over to Moranz within three days, and if not a mandatory injunction may issue, directing the sheriff to place Moranz in charge of the property.

William Walters and Ina Hundley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hundley of East Liverpol, have obtained a marriage license. They were married at the parsonage of the Lisbon Methodist Episcopal church by the Rev. C. N. Church.

Judgment Rendered.

Judgment by default has been rendered in common pleas court against Anton Cordill and Carrie Cordill for $101.20 and costs. In this action, wherein J. C. Cooke was plaintiff, the claim was filed for a judgment for a bill of groceries sold the defendants by the plaintiff.

Sale of Property Ordered.

The court has handed down a judgment for $3,011.60 in favor of the plaintiff in the case of U. W. Carson against Harry A. Inman and others, which was made a matter of record as of Aug. 13th last. Money, foreclosure and sale of premises was sought in this petition. The sale of property has been ordered, also a distribution of the proceeds.

Made Party Defendant.

Three national leaders in the Disciple church will take part in the meeting in January, these being W. R. Warren, editor of the World Call, of St. Louis; Jesse M. CASE APPEALED TO CIRCUIT COURT

An appeal to the circuit court will be taken by John H. Hinchliffe, owner of the Lisbon opera house, in the case filed against him by Samuel Moranz, owner of the Grand theatre, Lisbon. The court has set the appeal bond at $2,000.

In this action Hinchliffe, it is declared, agreed to lease the opera house to Moranz upon the receipt of a hand payment and for a stipulated annual rental, and also with the further stipulation that Moranz could have an option upon the purchase of the property.

Hinchlife, it is alleged, failed to turn the property over to Moranz as provided, and then Moranz went into common pleas court seeking an order whereby he would be given charge of the opera house.

The case was heard before Judge W. H. Spence, who before retiring from the bench Monday made an order that Hinchliffe turn the property over to Moranz within three days, and if not a mandatory injunction may issue, directing the sheriff to place Moranz in charge of the property.

Improvement In High School Grid Schedule Is Planned

Decker Seeks Games With Stronger Teams For Next Campaign

Salem, Wellsville and Akron East Certainties for 1927; Martins Ferry Probably Will be Home Attraction; Locals Will Try for Place on Youngstown South Bill.

INTRODUCING a new departure in schedule making for future activities of East Liverpool scholastic footballers, Faculty Manager Decker, in charge this year of the business affairs of local school athletics, is going into the Tri-State field for new games with new opponents of recognized caliber while retaining several of the old "standbys" that have always proved popular with followers of the Blue and White.

Decker has mailed letters to perhaps a score of schools in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania with a view to opening negotiations for games for the 1927 season and although his efforts may not meet with all the success this year that might be desired, they will have the effect of paving the way for future games, perhaps.

Salem, Martins Ferry, Akron East and Wellsville appear to be certainties thus far for next year's schedule, with the Salem and Martins Ferry engagements looming as home engagements.

The Salem clash has always stood as one of the big contests on the Blue and White card and deservedly so, because of the high brand of football dished up by the Quakers who this year managed to cop off county championship honors without a defeat.

There is no game on the schedule, of course, that would take the place of the Wellsville battle, which next year will be staged on the Orange and Black's home lot.

Martins Ferry has mixed with the locals on prior occasions and is figured to provide more of an attraction than a number of the smaller contests ordinarily billed.

Akron, which yearly produces a whole flock of good teams in Central, North west, South, East and others, will contribute another date to the 1927 schedule with East high doing the honors.

East appeared on a local field for the first time this year, trimming the Blue by a 6-0 count at Columbian park in the early part of the season. Next year's game will be played in Akron.

Decker also is angling for a game with Youngstown South, but may find it difficult to get on the strong Steel City team's card this year, at least. "Busty" Ashbaugh's outfit would rate as an outstanding attraction if a series could be arranged satisfactorily.

Efforts are being made to schedule Lisbon as high's opening game.

Fight Results

AT ALBANY, N. Y.—Tony Vaccarelli, of New York, won on technical knockout from Johnny Rocco, of New Rochelle, N. Y., in fourth round.

AT LOS ANGELES.—Mushy Callahan, junior welterweight champion, won on technical knockout from Paul De Hate of Compton, Cal., in first round.

TIGER FIGHTS EXCESS POUNDS

Georgia Deacon Too Heavy for Walker Battle.

By Gene Hoffman.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—It was third down with two to go for Tiger Flowers today in his fight to reach the 160-pound limit for his middleweight championship fight with Mickey Walker here Friday night.

When Flowers fought Sailor Huffman here November 22 he weighed 165 pounds, 5 pounds over the middleweight limit. Since then he has "downed" three units of the excess avoirdupois and has two yet to go. When the champion resumed gym work this morning he weighed exactly 162 pounds.

It is believed he will have little difficulty in making the weight, but whether or not the Georgia deacon will be strong enough at the division limit to retain his title against the hammering onslaught of the "made over" Mickey Walker, is something else again.

The challenger undoubtedly is in the best condition of his career. He is stronger and faster, and hitting harder than ever before, as demonstrated in his recent fight at Boston with Jock Malone. If Walker succeeds in pailing the champ on the jaw with that sleep-producing right of his, it will all be over except the coronation ceremonies.

Flowers, however, is a real champion. What he lacks in punching power he makes up in speed and strategy. If he is strong enough at the weight to shunt off Mickey's cyclone attack, he should stagger through to a decision. At any rate a real fight looms in the offing. It may be so close that providence will take a hand and decide it on the strength of the deacon's prayers before the battle. Who knows?

Walker's improved form since he lost his welterweight crown to Pete Latzo has made him a slight favorite in the betting.

An interesting card to support the main event has been arranged by Promoter Mullen. One bout will bring together Cowboy Billy Owens, Jack Kearns' latest heavyweight hope, and George Godfrey, the "black shadow of Lieperville," who Jimmy Daugherty maintains is the logical opponent for Gene Tunney. They will fight eight rounds in the semi-windup.

Wolcott Langford, another dusky son of Ethiopia, will meet Chief Jack Elkhart, in a second eight round encounter, and Chuck Burns of Texas, will fight Leo P. Flynn's star middleweight, Babe McGorgary, of St. Louis.

Hornets Set Pace.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Duluth's Hornets were setting the pace in the American Hockey association race today by virtue of their second straight victory over the Chicago Cardinals. The score was 3 to 1, the same as the first game, played last Sunday night.

The Cards were outclassed in every department of the game. They flashed only once, in the second period when Harry Reid took the puck the entire length of the rink to score Chicago's only goal.

Dunfield, La France and Peitler scored the Hornets' goals, one in each period.

BILL WALTERS MOUNT CAPTAIN

Deerfield Lad to Lead Purple Next Year.

ALLIANCE, O., Dec. 1.—William Walters, better known on the campus as just plain "Bill," has been elected captain of next year's football team by his team mates on the Mt. Union eleven.

"Bill" hails from Deerfield, O., where he played tackle one year on the Deerfield High school team. He entered Mount in the fall of '24, and played on the freshmen team on that year. In his sophomore year, he filled a guard position, but was shifted to left tackle on this year's team.

Walters has played a wonderful game the entire season on both the offense and defense. He is one of the reasons why Wooster was able to register only one first down through the Mount line on straight football. Walters does not play a spectacular game, but a steady and consistent one. He is a born fighter, and should make a splendid leader for the Purple next year.

"Bill" thinks his lucky number is 13, and does not allow any superstitions about it to bother him. To prove it, he wore jersey number 13 the whole season.

CARRIGAN TAKES HELM IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Bill Carrigan, new Red Sox manager, started right in today to build up his ball club. His first move, after agreeing to sign a two-year contract, was to wire Heinie Wagner, Sox star shortstop in the Carrigan days.

Manager Bill wants Heinie as chief scout. The old infielder was one of the strategists on the champion Sox in '15 and '16 and knows the Carrigan methods thoroughly.

Bill busied himself today poring into the dope of the Red Sox players, and getting a line on all possible trades that President Quinn has been trying to fix up.

Sees Huff in Action.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 1.—Walk Miller, manager of "Tiger" Flowers, middleweight boxing champion, was on hand here today to be present tonight when Danny Huff, Dayton negro featherweight, stacks up against Tony Sanders, of Chicago, in the main event at the McCabe club's indoor arena. Miller may sign Huff to a contract as the result of tonight's scrap. Joe Delaney, Dayton, faces Red Roberts, Cincinnati, over the six round distance while Leo Haney of Ashland, Ky., tackles Billy Seaman of Cincinnati in another six frame project.

Ahmid Ben Ali, Greek heavyweight wrestler, meets Johnny Mack, Cincinnati light heavyweight boxer in a mixed bout.

TUNNEY WON'T GET MOVIE JOB

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Gene Tunney has been discarded as the leading man for the motion picture version of George Bernard Shaw's novel, "Cashel Byron's Profession," it was learned today."

Tunney was reported as criticizing Shaw's story, which led Shaw to declare that he also had a right to criticize Tunney's fighting and to set up the claim that it was upon his advice and strategy that Tunney defeated Dempsey.

Carl Brisson, a Danish actor and dancer who has long been a matinee idol in England, is now slated to play the role once selected for Tunney, it is stated. Brisson has been well known as an amateur boxer.

The daily sketch states that a French concern has offered Shaw $100,000 for motion picture rights to the novel of Shaw's scenario collaboration. This was the sum Shaw asked from American producers and which they refused to pay.

"Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

How far back you drag the clubhead in the back swing is largely a matter of personal choice, comfort or results on the ball. Some players of long practice drag the clubhead away behind the hands of a point where the left arm is almost straight out from the body, in such position that the right hand is almost on top of the left. They then get the wrists to work and elevate the club upward with arms and wrists. This requires a very great rhythm of exertion since there can not be the least jerkiness or uneven speed in such a back swing. Abe Mitchell uses this great drag-back. Perhaps a better way is the "little-drag," by which the club follows just slightly back of the hands at the take-off and then is caught up immediately. What will suit you best will be found through trying out different lengths of drag-back, and the different timing required, until you find the one that yields you the best result.

Kaer Is Coast's Contribution To 1926 All-America Selections

"Greatest Quarterback I've Seen in 26 Years" is Tribute Paid Him by His Coach, Howard Jones.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—Morton Kaer, quarterback for the University of Southern California, is touted this year as the Pacific Coast's contribution to the 1926 All-American. And if as many All-Americans are compiled this year as were last season, Kaer's expectations cannot go awry. At least one of a hundred experts should see the light.

To continue in a severely representative manner, Kaer is the greatest ball runner the coast has ever developed. Ernie Nevers of Stanford and George Wilson of Washington were more potent at cracking a line, but Kaer, in the open, is as elusive as a budget balance.

Howard Jones, Kaer's coach, declared "Kaer is the greatest ball carrier I have seen in twenty-six years of football." And Jones, former coach at Iowa U. and Durham university, may have seen enough to form a basis for comparison.

Even the renowned "Four Horsemen" of several years ago, Jones believes, cannot compare with his latest sensation. In unison, perhaps, the Notre Dame backs were great; man-to-man Jones rates Kaer the best of the lot.

Kaer's chances for selection on the Pop Warner-Tad Jones-Knute Rockne All-American are excellent. Warner has seen him play and Rockne will have that dubious privilege when Notre Dame meets the Trojans on December 4. Tad Jones is the brother of Kaer's coach. If the young man has it in him he will be hard to overlook.

"Mort" came to U. S. C. as a beautiful track prospect from Red Bluff, Cal., in the northern part of the state. His athletic past was studded with dash and hurdle triumphs.

How Kaer happened to come way down south to Los Angeles when Stanford and the University of California intercepted geographically need not be over-stressed. It may have been the climate. Then again, zealous alumni need no lessons from bootleggers in the technique of "hi-jacking."

Kaer played no football before coming to Troy. Since then he has done nothing else. Although a "three-letter' man, Kaer's vaunted prowess on the track has earned the Trojans exactly one point in all his college career.

Kaer's success on the field is due to his great speed, although he can dodge like a pickpocket when harassed. He changes is pace like a woman's decision and defies the laws of equilibrium in handling his legs.

In the three hardest games on the Trojan schedule so far—the contests with Stanford, California and the Oregon Aggies—Kaer was the entire Trojan offense and wasn't stopped till he ran out of breath. The manner in which he skirted around the end, er slid off tackle, excited the admiration of "Pop" Warner of Stanford, who forgot for the moment that it was his line that was being eluded.

In the California and Oregon Aggies games Kaer did everything but run his own interference. Even the wet field at Portland, where the Oregon Aggies game was played, couldn't keep Kaer from distinguishing himself.

If Kaer is selected, and he surely can't help it if he plays against Notre Dame as he has all season, he will be the first Trojan player to be honored with an All-American nomination.

Last year he led all Pacific Coast scorers in number of points accumulated and is leading the league at the present time.

Tex Breaks Silence To Brand Frame-Up Rumor As Falsehood

Dempsey Was Too Proud of His Title Not to Give Tunney the Best He Had," Says Rickard in Defense of Ex-champ.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Breaking a silence that has been preserved these several months in the face of backstairs implication and innuendo, Tex Rickard today gave the lie to insistent stories that the Dempsey-Tunney fight had not been "level," in the patois of the back room; in effect, that it was a buck and wing.

Dan Morgan and Jimmy Johnston, famous managers, didn't agree with this cash and carry version of the fight, either, and said so. It seems they just didn't see it that way and they have seen much in their time.

Rickard's version was based on other premises. His defense of Dempsey was that the ex-champion was too proud not to fight.

"I know Dempsey too well ever to believe that he would do anything but fight his head off to keep the title," Rickard declared. "He was too proud of it to let it get away from him without making the effort of a lifetime. He's no different from any other man who held a championship. I never knew a champion who wasn't too vain to throw his title away and the great few of them who realized the challenger was a better man dodged the issue as long as possible.

"Dempsey wasn't that type, however. He realized he wasn't exactly right before the Tunney fight but never doubted that he would win.

"When it began to rain before the fight, I was badly worried and went to Dempsey's dressing room to tell him to be ready to start as soon as possible.

"'Never mind,'" he said. "'It will be over in a few minutes, anyhow.'

"Dempsey sincerely believed that he could march out to meet Tunney and bowl him right over. He had been told that he could win if he came out on roller skates and the idea that Tunney was a sap never left him until he was hit on the jaw in the first round. Then it was too late.

"As for me, I wasn't surprised that Tunney was able to win. I felt all along that he was the logical man for the spot. If I hadn't felt that way, I wouldn't have had him in there. That's only sound business policy. No man, most of all promoter, can afford to give the public what it doesn't want.

"Here's another thing: I could bring the Dempsey-Tunney bout back again next summer without the slightest 'build-up.' There's no doubt in my mind that Dempsey stands out as the public's choice as first challenger. Yet neither of us is in favor of this plan. I want him to meet one or two good men on his way back. He wants to prove to himself that he can come back before challenging Tunney. He wouldn't feel that way if the first fight had been phoney, would he?"

To the writer, it would seem that it is about time the case goes to the jury. A show-down, either one way or other other, is simple justice to all concerned, including the 127,000 odd who paid and paid and paid at Philadelphia.

Improvement In High School Grid Schedule Is Planned

Decker Seeks Games With Stronger Teams For Next Campaign

Salem, Wellsville and Akron East Certainties for 1927; Martins Ferry Probably Will be Home Attraction; Locals Will Try for Place on Youngstown South Bill.

INTRODUCING a new departure in schedule making for future activities of East Liverpool scholastic footballers, Faculty Manager Decker, in charge this year of the business affairs of local school athletics, is going into the Tri-State field for new games with new opponents of recognized caliber while retaining several of the old "standbys" that have always proved popular with followers of the Blue and White.

Decker has mailed letters to perhaps a score of schools in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania with a view to opening negotiations for games for the 1927 season and although his efforts may not meet with all the success this year that might be desired, they will have the effect of paving the way for future games, perhaps.

Salem, Martins Ferry, Akron East and Wellsville appear to be certainties thus far for next year's schedule, with the Salem and Martins Ferry engagements looming as home engagements.

The Salem clash has always stood as one of the big contests on the Blue and White card and deservedly so, because of the high brand of footbail dished up by the Quakers who this year managed to cop off county championship honors without a defeat.

There is no game on the schedule, of course, that would take the place of the Wellsville battle, which next year will be staged on the Orange and Black's home lot.

Martins Ferry has mixed with the locals on prior occasions and is figured to provide more of an attraction than a number of the smaller contests ordinarily billed.

Akron, which yearly produces a whole flock of good teams in Central, North west, South, East and others, will contribute another date to the 1927 schedule with East high doing the honors.

East appeared on a local field for the first time this year, trimming the Blue by a 6-0 count at Columbian park in the early part of the season. Next year's game will be played in Akron.

Decker also is angling for a game with Youngstown South, but may find it difficult to get on the strong Steel City team's card this year, at least. "Busty" Ashbaugh's outfit would rate as an outstanding attraction if a series could be arranged satisfactorily.

Efforts are being made to schedule Lisbon as high's opening game.

TIGER FIGHTS EXCESS POUNDS

Georgia Deacon Too Heavy for Walker Battle.

By Gene Hoffman.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—It was third down with two to go for Tiger Flowers today in his fight to reach the 160-pound limit for his middleweight championship fight with Mickey Walker here Friday night.

Tex Breaks Silence To Brand Frame-Up Rumor As Falsehood

Dempsey Was Too Proud of His Title Not to Give Tunney the Best He Had," Says Rickard in Defense of Ex-champ.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Breaking a silence that has been preserved these several months in the face of backstairs implication and innuendo, Tex Rickard today gave the lie to insistent stories that the Dempsey-Tunney fight had not been "level," in the patois of the back room; in effect, that it was a buck and wing.

Dan Morgan and Jimmy Johnston, famous managers, didn't agree with this cash and carry version of the fight, either, and said so. It seems they just didn't see it that way and they have seen much in their time.

Rickard's version was based on other premises. His defense of Dempsey was that the ex-champion was too proud not to fight.

"I know Dempsey too well ever to believe that he would do anything but fight his head off to keep the title," Rickard declared. "He was too proud of it to let it get away from him without making the effort of a lifetime. He's no different from any other man who held a championship. I never knew a champion who wasn't too vain to throw his title away and the great few of them who realized the challenger was a better man dodged the issue as long as possible.

"Dempsey wasn't that type, however. He realized he wasn't exactly right before the Tunney fight but never doubted that he would win.

"When it began to rain before the fight, I was badly worried and went to Dempsey's dressing room to tell him to be ready to start as soon as possible.

"'Never mind,'" he said. "'It will be over in a few minutes, anyhow.'

"Dempsey sincerely believed that he could march out to meet Tunney and bowl him right over. He had been told that he could win if he came out on roller skates and the idea that Tunney was a sap never left him until he was hit on the jaw in the first round. Then it was too late.

"As for me, I wasn't surprised that Tunney was able to win. I felt all along that he was the logical man for the spot. If I hadn't felt that way, I wouldn't have had him in there. That's only sound business policy. No man, most of all promoter, can afford to give the public what it doesn't want.

"Here's another thing: I could bring the Dempsey-Tunney bout back again next summer without the slightest 'build-up.' There's no doubt in my mind that Dempsey stands out as the public's choice as first challenger. Yet neither of us is in favor of this plan. I want him to meet one or two good men on his way back. He wants to prove to himself that he can come back before challenging Tunney. He wouldn't feel that way if the first fight had been phoney, would he?"

To the writer, it would seem that it is about time the case goes to the jury. A show-down, either one way or other other, is simple justice to all concerned, including the 127,000 odd who paid and paid and paid at Philadelphia.

SHEVERS VICTOR IN CUE MATCH

Promoter Suspended.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Fred Irwin, boxing promoter, will not do any promoting in Illinois for at least sixty days, it was learned today. Irwin was suspended for that length of time by the state boxing commission for his poor handling of the Tiger Flowers-Sailor Huffman fight here November 22. A lack of ushers and the resultant confusion over seats was the principal complaint.

Kaer Is Coast's Contribution To 1926 All-America Selections

"Greatest Quarterback I've Seen in 26 Years" is Tribute Paid Him by His Coach, Howard Jones.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—Morton Kaer, quarterback for the University of Southern California, is touted this year as the Pacific Coast's contribution to the 1926 All-American. And if as many All-Americans are compiled this year as were last season, Kaer's expectations cannot go awry. At least one of a hundred experts should see the light.

To continue in a severely representative manner, Kaer is the greatest ball runner the coast has ever developed. Ernie Nevers of Stanford and George Wilson of Washington were more potent at cracking a line, but Kaer, in the open, is as elusive as a budget balance.

Howard Jones, Kaer's coach, declared "Kaer is the greatest ball carrier I have seen in twenty-six years of football." And Jones, former coach at Iowa U. and Durham university, may have seen enough to form a basis for comparison.

Even the renowned "Four Horsemen" of several years ago, Jones believes, cannot compare with his latest sensation. In unison, perhaps, the Notre Dame backs were great; man-to-man Jones rates Kaer the best of the lot.

Kaer's chances for selection on the Pop Warner-Tad Jones-Knute Rockne All-American are excellent. Warner has seen him play and Rockne will have that dubious privilege when Notre Dame meets the Trojans on December 4. Tad Jones is the brother of Kaer's coach. If the young man has it in him he will be hard to overlook.

"Mort" came to U. S. C. as a beautiful track prospect from Red Bluff, Cal., in the northern part of the state. His athletic past was studded with dash and hurdle triumphs.

How Kaer happened to come way down south to Los Angeles when Stanford and the University of California intercepted geographically need not be over-stressed. It may have been the climate. Then again, zealous alumni need no lessons from bootleggers in the technique of "hi-jacking."

Kaer played no football before coming to Troy. Since then he has done nothing else. Although a "three-letter" man, Kaer's vaunted prowess on the track has earned the Trojans exactly one point in all his college career.

Kaer's success on the field is due to his great speed, although he can dodge like a pickpocket when harassed. He changes is pace like a woman's decision and defies the laws of equilibrium in handling his legs.

In the three hardest games on the Trojan schedule so far—the contests with Stanford, California and the Oregon Aggies—Kaer was the entire Trojan offense and wasn't stopped till he ran out of breath. The manner in which he skirted around the end, er slid off tackle, excited the admiration of "Pop" Warner of Stanford, who forgot for the moment that it was his line that was being eluded.

In the California and Oregon Aggies games Kaer did everything but run his own interference. Even the wet field at Portland, where the Oregon Aggies game was played, couldn't keep Kaer from distinguishing himself.

If Kaer is selected, and he surely can't help it if he plays against Notre Dame as he has all season, he will be the first Trojan player to be honored with an All-American nomination.

Last year he led all Pacific Coast scorers in number of points accumulated and is leading the league at the present time.

"Most for Your Money"

Urges Auto First-Aid Booths.

That first-aid dressing stations or booths be established at dangerous points on highways to care for victims of auto accidents, was the recommendation of a coroner's jury in Selby, England, at the inquest of a motor crash victim recently. It further urged that a list of the nearest doctors be posted in every dressing room, and suggested that the plan be brought to the attention of the Minister of Transport of the British government.

Tractors and modern agricultural implements are being introduced on rubber plantations of Hawaii.

1926 taxes became a lien April 11, 1926, the day preceding the second Monday in April.

First half must be paid not later than December 20th, 1926. Last Half must be paid not later than June 20th, 1927.

The correct way to pay a year's tax without penalty is to pay in December for December and the following June.

Penalty on delinquent Real Estate and Personal Property is 10 per cent.

When writing for a statement of your taxes, remember property appears on the Treasurer's books in the name of the person having title on April 11th, 1926 and that the law requires the Treasurer's books and receipts to be made out in the name of the party owning property when the lien took effect.

In writing for statement of taxes, always send last receipt, or give name of owner in April 1926, stating plainly in what city, town or township located, and whether real or personal property.

When you write for statement or pay by mail, enclose a self addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Examine your receipts and see that they are correct before you leave the Treasurer's Office.

Treasurer's Office will be open from 7 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

LISBON, O., 1926.

JO PIKE,
County Treasurer.

Urges Auto First-Aid Booths.

That first-aid dressing stations or booths be established at dangerous points on highways to care for victims of auto accidents was the recommendation of a coroner's jury in Selby, England, at the inquest of a motor crash victim recently. It further urged that a list of the nearest doctors be posted in every dressing room, and suggested that the plan be brought to the attention of the Minister of Transport of the British government.

Tractors and modern agricultural implements are being introduced on rubber plantations of Hawaii.

Lost Indian Tribe Loses Pension

A "lost" tribe of full-blooded Chippewa Indians—lost in the sense it cannot trace its descent and therefore does not share in pension money—is living on the St. Croix river, near Danbury, Wis. Here are Gus Premo; his wife, Annie Stone, and their two children. The papoose is bound tightly to a board which serves as his hammock-cradle as well as "baby carriage" on the back of his mother.

"LA BOHEME" IS REVELATION

Sometimes a filmed version of a famous classic is a failure; sometimes a revelation.

The latter term is the only one that can adequately describe "La Boheme," Lillian Gish's newest vehicle, now at the American theatre, in which, as "Mimi," the tragic heroine of the Latin Quarter, she shows the world a new Lillian Gish.

But this is not the revelation;—that lies in the story itself. The world is fond of "La Boheme" as the story is told in the opera; of its tender love story and its plaintive charm: but the tremendous drama of it—the real drama envisioned by the author of the famous old novel on which the opera was based, never showed, even in the significant Puccini music.

"La Boheme" in the film in a poignant drama of human souls; it is a story of love and jealousy; of faith and hope, of woe and despair, of humor and pathos. One is carried away by the hitherto-unsuspected immensity of the theme. But never for an instant does it lose that vital factor of a great film play—entertainment. It enthralls and charms —but it entertains always.

Lillian Gish has given the world "Romola," the heroine of "The Birth of a Nation," and other notable roles —but as "Mimi" she caps the climax of her career. Probably no one else in the entire world fits the role as she does; she is a veritable reincarnation of the author's brain-child. A wistful wisp of humanity, buffeted by the world, whose love can fire a man to genius; she is the spokeswoman of many a charmer of the Latin Quarter; an echo of the tragedy of the women of the art colony. She does it with an artistry that is superlative.

FOUR MEN SEEK COUNCIL PLACE

Goppert, Kommel, Darrah, Holland in Race.

At least four men will seek the council-at-large place left vacant by the resignation of Solon O. J. Herrington, at the meeting of the municipal legislative body tonight.

To End Severe Cough Quickly, Try This

For real results, this old home-made remedy beats them all. Easily prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous home-made remedy. The immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HALL-MILLS MISTRIAL DENIED

E. LIVERPOOL MAN HELD IN ALLEGED RUM PLOT

SAMUEL SAKOL ARRESTED WITH 40 OTHERS IN BOSTON PROBE

Charged With Conspir- to Smuggle Million Dollar Cargo.

MINOR DEFENDANT

Chelsea Exchange Bank Officers Among Accused.

Samuel Sakol, former resident of East Liverpool, is one of eight minor defendants, who have been indicted with 33 others by a federal grand jury at Boston in connection with an alleged conspiracy to smuggle a million dollar liquor cargo into the United States, press dispatches today said.

83,000 Gallons Seized.

Sakol, who is said to have been in business here for several months, left East Liverpool for New York about two years ago. Since then he has resided at various places in the United States and Canada, friends say.

The principal defendants of the alleged plot are Lewis H. Rothchild, president of the Chelsea Exchange bank, of Boston and his two associates, Harold Smythe and James V. Eloise. Minor defendants in the case in addition to Sakol, whose names have been made public are: Frank Poole and Harry Bedell, Baltimore; Charles Schwartz, Charles Morrini and Samuel Lasar, Philadelphia; William F. Taten, San Francisco, and William G. Price, Norfolk, Va.

The contraband liquor, said to amount to approximately 83,000 gallons, was carried by the steamer Cretan, which docked at Boston last July, apparently with a cargo of cement. Federal prohibition officials, growing suspicious of the cargo, started an investigation. As a result, they say they uncovered what is believed to have been one of the most gigantic liquor smuggling schemes brought to light since the adoption of the prohibition amendment.

MURDER JURY'S ANTAGONISTIC TO STATE CASE, SAYS SIMPSON

Alleges 12 "Men and True" Have Preconceived Opinion.

AFFIDAVITS READ

Charges Members Were Asleep; One Called Him Vile Names.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 1.—The state's motion for a mistrial in the Hall-Mills murder case was denied by Judge Charles W. Parker this afternoon.

COURTHOUSE, SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 1.—Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, today made a motion for a mistrial in the Hall-Mills murder case, alleging the jury is antagonistic to the state, that it is prejudiced and that it has a preconceived opinion.

Defense Objection Overruled.

"I move for a mistrial," said Simpson, "on the ground that the jury has a preconceived opinion, that it has not been properly guarded and that members of the jury have been asleep while the case was being tried."

The motion was made immediately upon the opening of court at 10:22 a. m. Simpson asked the jury be excused. Judge Charles W. Parker sitting with Judge Frank L. Cleary, granted the request. As the jury filed out, Robert H. McCarter, chief counsel of the defense, arose and said that he had read in the papers of the plan of the prosecution and objected against Simpson being allowed to make a motion for a mistrial.

The court overruled McCarter.

Dramatic Pause.

The court took the prosecutor's motion for mistrial under advisement.

Judge Parker announced that after he and Judge Cleary had reached their conclusion concerning the motion they would decide "as to whether the defense might be heard on the motion."

"Your honor, I move for mistrial in this case," said Simpson, "because of the failure of the bailiffs to properly guard the jury, and also because some of the jurors have been asleep while this case has been going on, and also because two of the jurors were in conference with counsel for the defense without any guards, and also because one member of the jury called me a —— —— and little —— —— ——."

There was a dramatic pause.

Prosecutor Names Accused Jurors.

The court requested Simpson to explain what members of the jury he saw talking to the defense counsel.

"I saw juror No. 6, Tillman, in conference with McCarter and Studer in front of the defense counsel table," said Simpson.

"Afterward I saw L. C. Barnhard talking to the defense counsel."

"When I saw juror No. 6 talking to

COTTON GROWERS' CHIEF URGES BUSINESS MEN TO HELP SOLVE PROBLEMS OF AMERICAN FARMER

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A plea for the American business man to understand and help solve the problems of the American farmer in order to prevent a political and economic conflict between agriculture and industry was made today through International News Service by C. O. Moser, of Memphis, Tenn., president of the American Cotton Growers Exchange.

"Through no fault of the cotton grower other than he was efficient enough to produce 4,000,000 bales more than could be consumed he is facing bankruptcy and the country as a whole has suffered a loss of $500,000,000," declared Moser. "It is more than a sectional debacle, being inextricably interwoven with the nation's financial and industrial life.

"The wheat grower of the middle west has suffered a similar economic experience within the past few years. If the agricultural situation is not solved 35,000,000 farmers will be ripe for radicalism.

Cotton Debacle.

"Such an economic catastrophe as the cotton debacle is a challenge to the intelligence of the country. A solution must be found either through private genius or through governmental agencies. The great mass of farmers, both of the south and middle west, do not believe the administration has made any conscientious effort to aid their plight.'

Moser interrupted the interview to explain that he was speaking from his personal knowledge of the farmers' viewpoint and not as an official of his organization which comprises 300,000 southern cotton growers.

"The government has helped industry with its difficulties through legislation and there is no reason why it should not do the same for agriculture," asserted Moser. "The business man and the metropolitan newspaper apparently do not understand the attitude of the farmer. The agricultural problem is a national problem of serious import and needs their study and support."

Moser said that while the southern farmer felt his problems to be distinctive in many ways from that of the middle-western farmer that if the present cotton disaster were repeated often enough it would force a political alliance between the two sections of the country.

Moser was asked his opinion on the drafting of the new McNary-Haugen bill for the stabilization of agriculture through the creation of a government corporation to export surplus farm products.

Moser said he did not believe the members of his organization would be interested in the export feature of the bill.

"Cotton is unlike other agricultural products in that it needs a world stabilization of prices," he said. "It cannot have one domestic price and another export price."

Moser, who has just returned from an inspection of the European textile industry, said he had found the textile business abroad in poor shape, with the British market in the worst condition and France doing better than other countries.

"In all countries the low price of American raw cotton had unsettled the market and affected the mills adversely," he said. "Owners said that the low price of the raw material had forced them to sell the finished product at a low figure."

Commenting on the new textile commerce commission inquiry into cotton freight rates, Moser predicted that it would be found the railroads were charging too high a tariff.

Moser is leaving today for Memphis where he will report concerning his trip abroad to his organization on December 15.

Police Warn Motorists To Be Careful During Yule Season

Observe Driving and Safety Regulations During Christmas Buying Period, Urges Chief McDermott.

Chief of Police McDermott today warned motorists to be particularly careful in driving through the downtown retail district.

"Be just as careful now, early in December, as you would be ordinarily during the few days shopping rush just preceding Christmas," the chief said. "People are doing their Christmas buying much earlier than usual in East Liverpool this season. Women and children, intent on their purchases, are in constant danger.

"Every motorist should observe all driving and safety regulations more carefully during the next three weeks than at any other season of the year," the chief added.

"During the next few days please bear in mind that the Christmas buying season has started early this year, and that ordinary late-December traffic conditions already prevail."

He further pointed out that this is the season when greater numbers of children than normally are on the downtown streets. Most of them are chaperoned by parents or others, but many youngsters are attracted to the downtown stores by the spirit of Christmas and are often "on their own." Motorists, said McDermott, should exercise extreme caution because of this situation.

"The motorist expects to be careful during the week before Christmas, when the downtown streets are jammed," the chief said. "His attention should likewise be called to the fact that the downtown early Christmas shopping traffic is unprecedently heavy now."

House Puzzles Two Nations.

A small house at Oost Cappel on the Belgian-French border is causing much concern to chiefs of customs in Brussels and Paris. The front door is in one country and the back door in the other. The French authorities are disturbed because dutable articles pass into the Belgian door and out of the rear into French territory. The Belgians are concerned when the route is reversed. No solution of the problem has yet been found.

A Possible King

The small boy in this picture has the support of Roumanian party leaders as the successor to the throne. He is Prince Michael, son of Princess Helen (pictured here) of Greece, Carol's deserted wife. King Ferdinand is reported to have told the former Crown Prince Carol he was willing to rescind his renunciation of the throne. Carol, rather than his small son, has the support of powerful factions. If the young Michael is given the throne, his mother would be regent.

Driving Sense

Detroit, where most of the automobiles are made, ought to know something about driving them. Detroit's latest driving ordinance embodies the result of careful observation and contains some features that deserve the respectful consideration of other communities. For example:

Not more than one sticker is permitted on any car, and it must be not more than 4 by 12 inches and must be placed in the lower, right-hand corner of the windshield. That will leave the glass, all round, fairly free for the driver to see through—which is really what the glass is intended for.

No more than three people are allowed on the front seat of a car, and the driver is not allowed to have anyone, either child or grown-up, sitting on his lap. Furthermore, the driver is forbidden to have one arm out of commission by reason of its being around some other person. To insure further that the driver's attention is not distracted from his main job, it is laid down that no passenger shall have an arm around the driver.

All this is drastic. But it is common sense, and is calculated to promote alike the safety of drivers, passengers and outsiders.

Free British Nations

The British family of nations has now agreed formally that all its individual members are free and equal, with only mutual good will and a figurehead king to do the honors as head of the family.

With good British sense, the committee that has been at work on this matter announces that it is satisfied nothing could be gained by trying to lay down a constitution for the British Empire, consisting as it does of units with different characteristics, different histories and different stages of development. Instead, it simply defines the existing condition of the dominions and states a few principles and recommendations. The first principle is:

"They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, in any respect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by common allegiance to the crown, and freely associated as members of the British commonwealth of nations."

To this an explanatory comment is added by the committee:

"Every self-governing member of the empire is now master of its destiny. In fact, if not always in form, it is subject to no compulsion whatever."

In carrying on negotiations with other countries, as a matter of courtesy to the members of the family, any member of the commonwealth will keep all the others fully informed and any of them may express an opinion on the subject.

It is a fine forward step and, somehow, typically British. The development has been inevitable and its formal acknowledgment is now made without any fuss or shouting or ever-stressing of its real importance.

The Left-over Gift

If you bought a gift for some one, to be presented during a visit with that person in you own home, and then the visit was cancelled, what would you do with the present?

That is the dilemma one Y. M. C. A. finds itself in because of the hurried conclusion of the Roumanian royal visit to the United States. A "Girl Reserve" bracelet of silver and blue and white enamel was made especially for the Princess Ileana. It was all full of symbolism and very pretty.

But the princess was unable to visit that city, so the trinket is suddenly the subject of a special meeting of association officials.

Right off-hand one wonders why they don't simply forward the gift to the princess with their regrets that she couldn't visit them. But there have been other suggestions which seem to complicate matters. Some people think the bracelet should be kept as a sort of trophy to be worn by specially honored Girl Reserve officers each year. Others think the ungiven gift might well be kept on hand as a lesson on the fickleness of royalty. Or it might be held for the next visiting princess.

The more suggestions are made, the more difficult the problem becomes. Which is a not uncommon situation when democracy tries to hobnob with royalty.

The Mother-Teacher

The irrepressible Bernard Shaw is up in arms because a scholarly and able married woman, head of a girls' school in England, is discharged because she has a baby.

'It would be far more sensible," he says, "to refuse to allow any woman to become a teacher unless she had at least one baby and looked after it properly."

That rule would be hard to apply literally. It might result in a serious shortage of teachers. Yet there can be little doubt that a mother's experience with her own children gives an intelligent woman an understanding of children and knowledge of handling them which is hard to acquire otherwise. The mother who has time and strength to teach other people's children should be peculiarly fitted for the work, if she has also the usual teacher's qualifications.

The French, who have been very much peeved because their money was falling in value, are now peeved because it's rising.

My Favorite Stories
By IRVIN S. COBB

ALL THE WAY BACK TO MOSES.

When you start tracing the family history of a wheeze you very often are due to a long journey back into the misty realms of antiquity and before you get through may find yourself qualifying as an ethnologist.

Once upon a time, I was writing a supposedly humorous article on the favorite dishes of various nations. I came to a point where I undertook to be facetious touching on the food of Britishers, and in this connection pulled a line which ran something like this:

"The average Englishman has but three standard vegetables, to wit boiled potatoes, boiled cabbage and another helping of boiled potatoes."

Response to this whimsey was immediate. A serious-minded Englishman in Canada by mail promptly took me to task. He pointed out that I had been guilty of a deliberate misstatement, one which reflected either upon my intelligence or my mathematical sense. For, as he very correctly observed, I have spoken of three vegetables and really named but two.

Also, from faraway Australia came another letter, also written by a transplanted Englishman, who writing more in charity than anger, deplored my intelligence of the scope and variety of the vegetable kingdom as found in the British Isles. He cited at least forty different varieties of edible vegetables which, he said were consumed on the tables of his countrymen at home, including such staples as the marrow, the rutabaga, the mangel wurzel, and the scarlet runner bean.

But that is not the main point I was getting at. As a matter of fact, my joke which seemed to have gone widely astray in the colonies was an adaptation of a very old joke. I merely had paraphrased the ancient anecdote of the little girl at school, who, being asked by her teacher to name six animals found in the Arctic region, answered:

"Three walruses and three polar bears."

Not long ago, I mentioned this incident, substantially as I have here recited it in the presence of a distinguished antiquarian, whereupon he told me that for the source of the joke I must hark back several thousand years. The very same story, he said had been used in slightly different form by a Greek fabulist who antedated even Aesop.

I am expecting now to hear that when the archeologists finish exploring the tomb of Tutankhamen they'll unearth a hieroglyphic which, when translated will prove to be a rendition of the same wheeze.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A decided drop in the cost of living in New York is forecast within the next year. This is especially true for those who reside in apartment hotels. The town has been on an apartment hotel building spree for some months.

In almost every mid-town block buildings have been raked down to make way for living quarters. The servant and other problems have relegated house-keeping to the scrap heap of lost arts. Wives have found a surcease from petty worries in this new freedom. It seems the sensible way to live in a big city.

There is no dusting, sweeping, window washing or curtain cleaning to do. A push of an electrical button brings a waiter or maid. Butlers by the hour when company comes are available. Meals are swished up piping hot from well regulated kitchens via the dumb waiter.

And a tenant may lock up the place on a moment's notice and be absent for days with a feeling of security. There are no prying, gossipy neighbors to discuss one's affairs. Mail tubes, taxis and other modern conveniences are at hand.

Until recently an increase of 5,000 apartment hotel rooms a year was a record and during the process of absorption apartment hotels had their problem. Now in one single year the increase has reached the proportions of 30,000 rooms.

These must be filled and it is obvious that to fill them with result in a slash of rentals. The demand is here, but the plain fact is there are not enough persons with salaries adequate to pay the very high rentals.

There are, by the way, very few 13th floors in modern office or hotel buildings. It is a bow to the superstitious and the numbers leap from 12 to 14. Very few will occupy a 13th floor.

It is becoming strictly bourgeoisie to wear formal dress to Saturday night pleasures in Manhattan. The cafes, the theatres and supper clubs are beginning to spot those who wear evening clothes as aliens in a sophisticated herd. All the exclusive haunts ordinarily frowning on informal habiliments consider them proper on this night. It is one evening in the week when patrons may be distinguished from waiters.

An observing pedestrian has observed that the famous twin stone lions in front of the public library are not exact replicas. On each lion the tail is curled toward the steps.

One of the most vivid touches of realism the stage has presented this season is a cabaret "hoofer" solemnly crossing himself in the dressing room before going out to face the ringside mob. They do that in real life.

A cold light on one of those midnight to dawn courtships and marriages was revealed in a telegram from the groom to his intimate friend filed in a lonely village up the Hudson next day. It read: "We got drunk, married and the hebegeebies."

And there is that current story of a certain playwright who went on a protracted bender and awakened in a London hotel without a single remembrance of crossing the ocean. He wired to his club: "In case anyone inquires for me I am not there."

A Broadway simile: "As helpful as a glass eye at a keyhole.

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Indians and Their Oil Money.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—On and after December 1, Uncle Sam, through the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Department of the Interior, will cease to be responsible for bills incurred without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, by the Osage Indians, who are his wards.

This measure was not adopted because Uncle Sam is a hard-hearted, determined to keep his wards from spending their own money and to retain in his own hands every possible dollar of their income, but in order to conserve their resources and to prevent the exploiting of the Indians by unscrupulous whites.

One of the favorite ruses of the latter has been to give the Indians credit for goods of all kinds, from automobiles to player pianos, and then call upon the government to settle the bills. They could show bona fide sale and delivery of the goods and eventually have always been able to collect the money, although the government agents had repeatedly issued orders and requests that sales on credit be stopped. The Act of Congress, however, will put a definite stop to the practice.

Osage Indians and white business men in contact with the reservation of the Osage Nation in Oklahoma are primarily those affected by the law. The Osages are the richest people in the world due to the fact that the richest oil producing field in the United States is located on their tribal lands. Last year each enrolled Osage received from the government approximately $13,200, some families receiving as high as $112,000, derived largely from oil royalties and bonuses.

A per capita income of $13,200 for the 2,229 enrolled Osages adds or multiplies up to a tribal income of almost $30,000,000 for the year. It means, also, that each Osage is worth at least $250,000. That is to say, each has an income that is five per cent on more than a quarter of a million. The family income depends, of course, upon the number of members of the family who were placed on the enrolled list at the time the allotment was established.

Vast Quantities of Oil.

During the year 33,662,179 barrels of oil were produced in the Osage Reservation, upon which the Indians received one-fifth and one-sixth royalties required under the terms of the leases, the total royalty income depending upon the amount of oil produced and the price at which it was sold. In addition, the bonuses received for leases sold during the year amounted to $1,758,950, and the deferred bonus payments from previous sales paid in during the year amounted to $13,740,607.

All this money was collected by the government, for when the tribal lands were allotted to the Osages they were given merely the surface of the land. The mineral rights were reserved for the benefit of all the members of the tribe and they share equally in oil royalties and bonuses. This initial precaution no doubt prevented the Indians from being swindled out of their oil wealth, or having it taken from them for a mere fraction of what it has proved to be worth, for they can not dispose of their mineral rights as individuals.

Not all the Ostages are paid their full incomes each year. Only those who have been adjudged competent to administer their own financial affairs handle all the money. Those who are rated incompetent receive allowances of $4,000 each for adults and $2,000 each for children under 18 years of age. Additional allowances are made in emergencies and for travel, especially for anything that may be shown to be for the educational or health betterment of the Indians, subject to the approval of the inspectors and superintendents. Indians who have been declared competent may have their certificates revoked if later it appears that they really are not to be trusted with handling all their own money without supervision. The surplus of the incomes beyond the allowances made and bills paid is accumulated by the government against the day when the oil fails.

The Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes—Choctaws, Cherokees, Creeks, Chickasaws and Seminoles—did not reserve the mineral rights to the tribes when allotments were made, hence some of them have received tremendous sums in oil royalties and bonuses, while others have had only the modest incomes derived from agricultural lands. Some of the Creeks have received as much as $50,000 a year in royalties. Jackson Barnett, a Creek, refused to select an allotment and had to be awarded one arbitrarily. His practically worthless farm land turned out to be one of the richest oil fields in the Creek Nation. In all, 13,532,857 barrels of oil were produced last year on restricted Indian allotments within the Five Civilized Tribes.

Oil has also been discovered in the Pawnee, Otoe, and Kiowa Reservations in Oklahoma; the Crow Reservation in Montana; the Shoshone Reservation in Wyoming, and the Navajo Reservation in New Mexico.

How Credit Has Been Abused.

How the whites have abused the matter of extending credit to Indians may be shown by one or two examples. One Indian youth who had run through thousands of dollars in a very short time recently received newspaper publicity as the owner of nine automobiles. He was not entitled to quite that. What happened was that he bought a car on credit, traded it in for a more expensive car on an additional credit, and repeated that operation until he had nine cars within a brief period, for none of which he had paid and on all of which he owed varying amounts.

Obviously it was not necessary for this Indian to go through transactions of that kind and to that number in order to get an automobile that was sufficient for his needs and in keeping with his financial status. Nine dealers or salesmen, however, got a profit out of the sale of a car to him. A ruling made November 6 backed by the law of 1925 will put a stop to this sort of thing.

In another case, an Indian maiden of 22 years who was not rated as competent and therefore received only $4,000 a year out of her income, ran up bills for clothes and trips during the year that aggregated $8,000.

Indians have at this time approximately $22,000,000 of tribal funds and $34,000,000 of individual funds in the federal treasury and on deposit in 750 banks that pay interest averaging four per cent. In addition, $31,500,000 belonging to individual Indians has been invested in government securities, which are held for safe-keeping by the treasury department, the interest being paid to the Indians semi-annually.

Much has been heard of the exploiting of Indians by whites—the famous transaction in which Indians were traded out of Manhattan Island for $24 worth of rum and beads, for instance—but who has ever heard of Indians exploiting Indians?

Consider, then, this transaction: The wonderfully rich oil lands of the Osages were purchased by the Osages from the Cherokees in 1883 at a price of $1.25 per acre.

At the time of this sale, it is said, the Cherokees thought they had made a fine bargain. Probably the Indians who sold Manhattan Island thought as well of their transaction at the time they made it?

Abe Martin Says--

"Now what have I done t' git on th' sucker list?" said Lafe Bud this mornin' as he opened a weddin' invitation.

Lots o' things are awful high, but I don't believe anything has gone up like th' dime novel, some o' which sell fer $3.

THREE DAY COLDS THREATEN LUNGS

A cough or cold that hangs on after the third day is a threat.

Do something! Don't wait until the cold has run its course—from your head to your throat—from throat to chest or bronchial tubes. Break up your cold before it settles in this "danger zone"; for inflammation spreads, and your bronchial tubes lead directly into your lungs.

Quickly and unfailingly Ayer's Cherry Pectoral goes straight to the seat of trouble. With the very first swallow you feel its comforting warmth. You feel its soothing, healing powers reaching deep down into your bronchial tubes. You feel it penetrating through and through the irritated membranes.

This healing medication, absorbed into the membranes themselves, breaks up the cold, stops the cough, brings prompt and lasting relief.

If you are catching cold; if you have a "head cold"; if your chest is tight; if you have a cough—even if bronchitis has developed—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral at once!

Cherry Pectoral is pleasant, safe and dependable—for children and grown people. At all druggists—60c; twice as much, $1.00. 2a2c

SEAL CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED HERE

Annual Drive is Being Conducted by Chester Woman's Club.

Annual sale of Christmas Health seals opened here last week and will continue until December 25, under the auspices of the Chester Woman's club with Mrs. John Swindell as chairman.

During previous years members of the club conducted a house-to-house canvass and solicited from booths in the bank. This year the drive will be made mostly by school children and only business houses will be solicited.

Members of the club have issued an appeal to the public, requesting a generous response.

MEASLES SET NEW RECORD IN STATE

Measles last year reached a new high record in West Virginia, registering 13,672 cases, or more than one half of all the communicable diseases reported to the division of Preventable Diseases of the State Health Department. This report according to Dr. David Littlejohn, shows that many people are still of the belief that the so-called "children's diseases" are not to be escaped and they, therefore, take no precaution in shielding children from contagion which often proves fatal or undermines the child's health for life.

Doctors are urging the protection of children from all communicable diseases, particularly very young children as the older the child the greater his powers of resistance. The London doctors are advocating the hospitalizing of all cases of measles as this disease in the present severe form is more to be dreaded than scarlet fever. West Virginia death reports also show more deaths from measles than scarlet fever.

It has been discovered that epidemics of measles appear about every three years, and figures now available seem to bear this out. In 1923 there were 10,567 cases of measles reported in West Virginia; 1924, 2,495; 1925, 2,252, and in 1926, 13,672.

WORK PLANNED BY FARM WOMEN

More than two hundred farm women's clubs in West Virginia have set out on a definite plan of work for the next twelve months. A large part of these are undertaking a study of foods including such topics as winter vegetables and their preparation, plans for the vegetable garden and planning the vegetable budget for next year, the canning and storing of vegetables, and the use of vegetables in the diet.

A series of lessons on kitchen improvement is also very popular with the women this year; floors, walls and woodwork; farm home water systems, and kitchen equipment, kinds, use and care. A kitchen improvement contest goes with this series of lessons.

Other lesson series that are being studied include a series on the family, one on citizenship, interior decoration, health and recreation. The study of the family takes up meal service, table service and etiquette, books and reading for the home, home making or housekeeping, and music for the home. The course on citizenship includes a study of state and county officials and their duties, state institutions, work of the state board of children's guardians, and the place of Four-H club work in the community.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

ROAD GRADING TO BEGIN SOON

MAN IS KILLED ON LOCOMOTIVE

Run Down by Train Near King's Crossing.

Body of an unidentified man who was struck and killed by Chester-Steubenville passenger train No. 927 near King's crossing Monday afternoon, is being held today at Elliott's morgue, Steubenville.

The victim, who is about 35 years old, is said to have been sitting on the edge of the ties, when the train approached. He failed to heed the warning whistle. The engine struck him a glancing blow, knocking him from the rails and rendering him unconscious.

He was removed to the Ohio Valley hospital, Steubenville, where he died three hours later. Search of the victim's clothing failed to disclose his identity.

Mont J. Daugherty, 50, of Pittsburgh, is in the Gill hospital, Steubenville, suffering internal injuries received when his engine turned over in the yards at Weirton Junction early Tuesday morning. His condition is not serious.

WET-DRY VOTE IN ONTARIO

Government Control of Liquor Issue at Polls.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Dec. 1.—Ontario, voting today for "yes" or "no," on a government control of liquor plan, expects to see the largest vote of any election in the history of the province rolled up.

The six weeks' campaign has been featured by the greatest display of bitterness shown in any election campaign in the province of Ontario in decades. The prohibitionists are counting on the women's vote and the rural element to bring them victory which will mean a tightening up of the Ontario temperance act.

Under the leadership of Premier Howard Ferguson the Conservative party is seeking a return to office on government control of the liquor problem.

One of the feature battle crys of the "drys" throughout the campaign was that if Ontario goes "wet" it will be the "barroom for United States."

A high light of the campaign is the fact that at least three million United States dollars are tied up in real estate contracts bordering along the Ontario-United States frontier. These deals are all on option and have special clauses in them that they will be dropped unless this province votes "wet."

ROSE-MARIE MUSICAL HIT

Hammerstein's Great Success Here on December 7.

"Rose-Marie," which comes to the Ceramic theatre Tuesday, December 7, is one of the greatest musical comedies ever produced.

The superb and melodic score by Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothart is a rare musical treat and a stimulant to the musical student and few who have heard those musical gems of "The Indian Love Call," "Rose-Marie," "The Door of My Dreams" and the stirring march song of the "Mounties" will soon forget these haunting melodies. The gorgeous costumes, the colorful uniforms and the beautiful scenic effects, especially the inspirational mountain scenes of the Canadian "Rockies" are settings that inspire you with their grandeur.

"Rose-Marie," unlike most musical comedies, has a well-told dramatic story that holds interest until the final curtain. The interest is so sustained that it would make a good evening's entertainment even without music. still the play is surcharged with comedy that does not offend or cause one to hold her program in front of her face which is the great reason for the tremendous success of the play.

The glorious voices of the principals that include Ethel Louise Wright, Paul Donah, Grace Wells, Charles Meakins, Peggy Pates, Houston Richards, Frank Harrington, Karyl Kunkel, James Moore, Neil Moore and the chorus send forth in great golden streams the lovely melodies featured in their roles. Aided by the symphony orchestra the players render the richly scored melodies in a manner that you are not likely to have heard in a whole generation of musical plays.

CITY FIGHTS SWANEY SUIT

Re-hearing Asked on Fourth Street Contract.

Application for a re-hearing of the application of Frank Swaney, as a tax-payer, for a permanent injunction against the improvement of Fourth street, was filed in common pleas court at Lisbon yesterday afternoon by City Solicitor Frank Hoover, representing John W. Moore, service-safety director and defendant in the action.

The petition charged that the decision which favored Swaney, was "contrary to the weight of the evidence and contrary to law."

Should a new trial be granted the evidence will be heard by Judge W. F. Lones. The first hearing was conducted before Judge W. H. Spence.

Reichstag Will Give Approval to Reform Of Election System

BERLIN.—Germany is going to reform her election system. It has been found out by almost all parties that is too complicated, extreme, and not democratic, in the ideal sense of the word.

The government has worked out a reform program of the election system which will be submitted to the reichstag for approval. Being a minority government and compelled to lean on the support of either the Socialist or the Nationalist if desiring to have a law passed, the government, therefore, has made it a point not to propose changes involving a change of the constitution, for a law changing the constitution requires a two-third majority of the reichstag.

The government, in its reform program, purpose to abolish the system of "election lists." According to this system mandates were claimed on the principal of "so many votes, so many mandates." One hundred thousand votes polled for a party were required to obtain a seat, regardless of whether the candidate had "carried" his constituency or not. Thus, for instance, it could happen that a party scored, say, half a dozen seats without any of its candidates carrying a single constituency.

The reform program of the government now proposes to return to the old system characterized by "one candidate—one constituency."

SYNOPSIS.

Julian Reed is wandering southern California in his little roadster. At luncheon in a small restaurant he meets, by chance, a charming, rather wistful young woman. She has missed connections with a troupe of vagabonding actors and he offers to drive her to the troupe's next stopping place, La Jolla. She accepts his offer. She, like Julian, is from the East. They overtake and pass the trucks bearing the rest of the troup. As they stop for dinner, the others come in. Julian meets Watt, the chief of the "Wayside Theatre;" Sadie, an ex-chorus girl, and the rest. Julian comes to the rescue of the troupe financially. Sadie is attracted to him. She tells him how Hester risked everything to try for the leading role in a movie of a play written by "Robert Johns," failed and joined the troupe as a last resort. That night, after the performance, Julian and Hester, in his car, confide in one another and Julian kisses Hester. But next morning, she learns of his financial help to Watt, is angry and will have nothing to do with him. Watt offers him a half interest in the enterprise for $4,000 and he accepts. Then he goes to Hollywood. While there he buys a snappy roadster and new clothes preparatory to interviewing the Interstellar Picture company. In the meantime Watt gives a dinner to the troupe, introducing a new member, a college boy, Joe Maybury. He sits next to Hester at dinner and tells her how he and his friends enjoyed her performance the previous night and wanted to met her. Murry Watt tells the others about Julian buying a half interest in the busines. After dinner Maybury follows Hester. She knows he is much younger than she but hopes he will fall in love with her and restore her faith in herself. The other members of the troupe understand and pity her.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

It would have disturbed Hester to learn how surely she was understood, how her most intimate personel problem was the plainest of facts. And to know that their feeling toward her, their frank appreciation of her fragile gift and their honest friendliness, was tinged with pity would have hurt her deeply. But so it was. They knew that she took life hard, that her fine emotional quality had lingered too long in the bud and now threatened to burst into untimely flower. She felt only a little conspicuous, during these puzzling hours of self-absorption, in taking Joe Maybury down on the beach and then riding all the way to El Centro with him on the tailboard of the light truck. It came naturally enough. The two of them returned to the camp barely in time to find a place there. She had even hesitated about, and suggested squeezing in on the front seat; but the stage manager was in a hurry to get under way and waved her back. All of them acted as usual, good-humoredly and irresponsibly. They didn't joke with her, a significant fact that escaped her notice. So she found herself being lifted up to her seat by Joe Maybury's strong hands. It was what she had wanted. She was smiling now without reason.

She found it delightful there on the tailboard. It was the custom to lay a blanket across and fit in the bedding rolls to form a soft back to the seat. The couple that rode there were hidden from those in front, and as the big truck usually went on ahead, they had the world to themselves. She wholly forgot that she had been known to complain of the sun and heat and the smell of the exhaust just beneath. She curled up like a child and rested her head against a bedding roll and gave herself to the spell of his unflagging youth. The stirring thing was that he so frankly enjoyed being with her. How stirring she needn't and didn't let him know.

By this time he was using her first name as if he had known her for years. "May as well," he remarked in his offhand way the first time he uttered it, "cut off a few days of preliminaries." He took liberties with her, but so easily and casually that she didn't resist.

Toward dusk he grew boyishly serious and made her talk about her work and about acting down East. He had never been in New York, or, for that matter, out of California. And she, who had seldom found it easy to talk personally, let herself go and felt a thrill in the experience.

They stopped for supper, early in the evening, at a mountain inn. The desire to keep him near her was disturbingly strong, and so she moved quickly away and found a place at table between Sadie and Grace Appleby only to sit distrait and silent. She knew that he was disappointed. He even followed a few steps before he caught her purpose, and then dropped down with the crew at another table. It was better; his proper place. But had she driven him away? She hadn't looked ahead. Her thoughts went dark again. After supper she went alone out the door and, as casually as she could, took up a position beside the light truck. Would he come? He did, taking her little elbow again in those strong hands and tossing her up on the seat; and she laughed softly.

One or two of the other merely glanced at them and then went on about their business. Not a word was spoken. But from that moment the whole troupe knew, accepted, indeed, the fact that Hester had at last broken bounds. And their judgment was tempered by that undertone of pity.

A thought disturbing to Hester—it came later as the trucks rolled into El Centro—was that his forwardness might make it difficult for him to accept the discipline of the troupe. In her heart she was already siding hotly with him, even while she sensed and weighed the problem. It was a relief to observe that he pitched in quietly and aptly at the work of unloading and setting up the tents. He knew outdoor life; and he wasn't afraid of work, but went at it with the zest and primitive energy that gave color to everything he did and said. With his coat off and sleeves rolled up, he exhibited the chest and shoulders of a Greek wrestler. Covertly, she watched him as she set up her own cot and unstrapped her blanket roll.

She lay awake that night long after the other girls were asleep. The tent flaps were thrown back and the dry night air of the desert blew across her face. She was curiously unhappy. This sort of thing wouldn't do. She'd simply have to stop it. The real problem lay in what she felt to be her own weakness. Her sleep was broken and troubled with dreams. She awoke at dawn, and lay still, her head pillowed on her arm, mournfully observing Sadie, who lay at the same end of teh tent. Sadie made a lovely picture, her naturally blond bobbed hair fluffed about her face.

Sadies was really a beauty. She had the morals and the disarming friendliness of a half-grown puppy. Indeed, that was her favorite description of herself, "a friendly pup." Big-hearted, was Sadie; never ruffled, apparently never tired, liked by every one. She hadn't a grain of pretense in her happy-go-lucky nature. She had even a sort of character of a sensibleness that was as valuable. She never made trouble; this perhaps because she wasn't selfish. Somehow she drifted along, always sunny and amusing. No one knew what troubles might be hers. And she must have already lived through a great deal. She was sleeping now like a baby.

"Damn this old New England conscience!" though Hester, with a characteristic little twinge at the boldness of the unuttered phrase. "Thing for me is to behave myself. I'm an old fool."

But then, after dressing and quietly greeting the others, she met him by the stage and recklessness returned. She had lost overnight something of the cheery sure atmosphere he gave out, but his friendly grin and the warm touch of his hand on her shoulder brought it instantly back. They walked together to breakfast. And in the afternoon they took a long walk. It happened naturally enough. Or his offhand manner made it seem natural. She perceived now that the others were drawing off. Even Sadie was aloof. The second night there in El Centro was worse than the first. She felt a wreck when she got up in the morning. The hand mirror showed dark rings under her eyes. Sadie must have noticed her appearance from the busy way she chattered about the new hangings that had been ordered for the stage, and the talk of a new and wonderful generator for the lights, and the rows of attentive little Japanese that had been in the audience.

Hester barely heard her. Her nerves were tingling. And after breakfast, with dread in her heart, fighting herself every step of the way, she moved over by the light truck. She wasn't even honest about it, but made a pretense of looking for a last minute something in her suitcase. Then, as if it were a matter of course, he came and lifted her up and they rode away through the desert country with its gridiron of irrigating ditches and its rich yield of food.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

FALL-DOHENY DEFENSE SCORES IN ITS COURT INNING

HOGAN, CHIEF COUNSEL, WINS SECOND ROUND IN OIL CASE

Testifies Fall Left Lease Granting to Assistant.

By George E. Durno.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—President Harding was fully advised of the reasons for making the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, oil storage contract with the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, and so informed the senate in a formal message in which he gave his endorsement to the transaction.

This fact was brought out today in the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny, millionaire oil operator, by Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, who introduced into evidence a report to Harding from the interior department, under date of June 3, 1922, and Harding's message to the senate under date of June 7, 1922.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Opening the seventh day of the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny, oil magnate, Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, through final cross-examination of a government witness obtained as many points favorable to the defense as Owen Roberts, heading federal counsel, had adduced in the opposite direction yesterday.

The witness was E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior. Through adroit questioning, Hogan conveyed to the jury the picture that Fall had left the whole matter of granting oil leases to Finney: H. Foster Bain, director of the Bureau of Mines; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt; Admiral J. R. Robison, and Secretary of the Navy Denby.

Previously, under direct examination, Roberts, by equally clever questioning, had made it appear that Fall was the guilding genius in the letting of the oil leases to Doheny, which the government contends were tainted with fraud.

Mistrial Denied

the defense he was not under any guard or escort.

"It is also a fact that juror No. 5 was dozing off to sleep when Mrs. Jane Gibson was giving her testimony from a bed in this courtroom."

Reads 12 Affidavits.

Simpson began to read 12 affidavits in which charges of laxity and violation of their sworn duties were made.

One of these affidavits charged that Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain choir singer, had seen, on November 13, juror No. 6, talking to Attorneys McCarter and Studer of the defense and that she also saw this same juror nodding several times.

An affidavit was read signed by Robert Connors, who is a night watchman for the Redfern company of Somerville, which said:

"About 7:15 p. m., on Saturday, November 13, 1926, I was walking along Main street, between Union and Davenport streets, Somerville, N. J. I saw William Force of Cliff street, Somerville, N. J., call one of the jurors on the Hall-Mills case, who was walking with a man I think is a constable. I saw them in conversation for about five minutes and they were still talking when I left. The man who I think is the constable stood about eight or nine feet away from the juror and William Force while they were talking."

Simpson then read an affidavit signed by Robert Lindval, to the effect that this man saw juror No. 2 "nodding and apparently asleep."

Hotel Owner in Court.

Simpson read affidavit after affidavit, making the same charge. In several of the affidavits the witnesses stated that the jurors while eating in a restaurant on Main street were listening to audible comment on the Hall-Mills case made by the public. In court not far from Simpson was Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial hotel, who made the first open charge against the jury. Van Doren several days ago wrote a letter to the court in which he said that the jurors left their doors wide open and that he frequently heard them openly discussing the case. He alleged that they were lax in other ways about the hotel and stated today that three members of the jury are prepared to back him up in his charges.

Van Doren said he was prepared to go on the witness stand and testify.

It was reported this morning that three members of the jury who Van Doren says are willing to back up his statements, are Frank Dunster, foreman of the jury, and Charles V. Skillern and Raymond Young.

"Pretty Bad," Defense Admits.

"Mr. Abe Crim has sworn that he saw one juror sleeping," said Simpson. "Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt has made an affidavit that she saw another juror asleep.

"Robert Connors has sworn that at 7 p. m., November 22, he saw Edward Force, a resident of Somerville, fall in line with Edward Tillman while the jury was walking down Main street after supper."

Force is a son-in-law of Frank Dunster, foreman of the jury.

Simpson mentioned several instances where jurors were seen talking alone to outsiders.

The contention of the defense, it was learned, will be that the affidavits were taken in the last two days, yet pertain to incidents taking place some time ago. They will argue that the prosecution played this card only when it saw that the trial was going against the state.

But the weight of the affidavits did not escape the defense.

"Pretty bad," murmured Senator Chase, aside to his co-workers.

"You're right, it's pretty bad," responded Simpson who overheard Case's remarks.

Newspaper Man on Stand.

After Judge Parker had announced that he would take Simpson's motion for a mistrial under advisement, the jury came back to their seats.

W. Pledge Brown, New York newspaper man, was called. He was asked if he was in an elevator in Brooklyn several months ago with Felix Di Martini, private detective fof Mrs. Hall four years ago, and Mrs. Marie Demarest.

(Mrs. Demarest has testified that Di Martini, tried to bribe her for $2,500 if she would "forget that she saw Henry Stevens" in New Brunswick the morning after the murder. Di Martini denied he ever saw or knew Mrs. Demarest.)

"What did Di Martini say," Brown was asked.

"Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Brown was cross-examined by Defense Counsel Clarence Case.

"Are you another New York Mirror man?"

"I am."

Brown was excused.

Rebuttal Testimony.

Captain Harry Walsh was called. He testified, too, that he was in the elevator and that Di Martini said "Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Lieutenant Walter Cicceuch was called and testified to the same effect.

Ray Crim, a Philadelphia newspaper man, testified he was present at Tom's river when Arthur Applegate, a fisherman, made a statement to Simpson to the effect that Applegate could not remember what date Henry Stevens caught the big blue fish.

Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, sister of Mrs. Mills, was recalled and testified that Di Martini told her that he had "seen" Mrs. Jane Gibson. Di Martini had testified that he never went to Mrs. Gibson's home.

At this point the state ended its rebuttal testimony.

Sur-rebuttal Witnesses.

The first sur-rebuttal witness for the defense was Elbridge W. Stain, of Montclair, N. J., a handwriting expert.

He testified he had examined Henry Stevens' diary of 1922 and said the line "At max in aft" was written before the fourth line "one blue 4 lbs." A state witness had testified just the reverse.

Herbert J. Taylor, finger-print expert, was then called and asked concerning alleged superimpositions on the defense's enlarged photographic exhibits. Simpson objected and a long argument ensued.

Taylor was allowed to answer and said there were super-impositions at two points on the enlarged card. He took a pencil and indicated where.

Wilbur E. Rogers, Brooklyn newspaper reporter, was called and testified he was in the elevator in Brooklyn when Mrs. Demarest and Di Martini met.

He did not hear Di Martini say, "Hello," Mrs. Demarest," he said.

Raymond Daniels, New York City reporter, also was in the elevator and did not hear Di Martini address Mrs. Demarest. He said he was now listening.

The defense then rested at 12:02 p. m.

All the evidence in the case was in at 12:02 this afternoon when the defense finished with its sur-rebuttal witnesses.

Jury Excused Until 1:30.

Immediately the evidence was in, Justice Parker ordered that the jury be excused until 1:30 this afternoon. Simpson then read the affidavit from Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial hotel where the jury is quartered, to the effect that the jury had been openly discussing the case, that some members of the jury indicated they did not believe the testimony of Mrs. James Gibson and that in Van Doren's opinion they had a preconceived opinion regarding the verdict.

Simpson spoke at length on his motion for a mistrial. "There will be more chance of a fair verdict before twelve trees than before these twelve men from Somerset county," said Simpson," "because in the course of time the trees would blossom forth, but the minds of the twelve men here never will."

Meat Dealers See Eve at "High Price, Cheap Cuts" Meet

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 1.—Six hundred members of the Retail Meat Dealers' association told their wives they were going to a meeting to learn new wrinkles about getting higher prices for the cheaper cuts, and so forth.

At the Eagles' hall, after the business was disposed of, two girls appeared on the platform, and began to dance. It was warm in the hall, and the girls began shedding their sparse drapery.

Finally, at the height of a fast Charleston, they got down to essentials, and the cheers rose louder and louder.

Then a police captain and ten coppers butted in and pinched the house.

The butchers were detained half an hour, but later permitted to go home, while the two girls and the charman of the program committee were booked for participating in and promoting an indecent exposition.

'PRODIGAL SON' EVANGELIST'S SERMON TOPIC

Rev. O. A. Newlin in United Presbyterian Pulpit.

SPECIAL MUSIC

"Most Prevalent Sin" Subject for Tonight's Services.

"Preaching what he characterized as three sermons in one" Rev. O. A. Newlin, Winona Lake, Ind., evangelist, held a large audience enthralled at the First United Presbyterian church last evening by a unique and singularly analytical presentation of the promptings, experiences and accomplishments of the so-called "Prodigal Son." His subject was "The Pearl of Parables."

By stories replete with humor and wholesome comparison to present day conditions, he erected a finding from the whole that only in Jesus Christ may earth peace be found and heavenly salvation attained.

Preceding his discourse he gave another of his Bible readings on the fifteenth chapter of Luke.

The invocation was made by Rev. Mr. Walker, pastor of the Emmanuel Presbyterian church. Prof. John C Ussher, following the direction of an inspiring song service, sang, "How Precious Thy Thoughts Are to Me."

The subject of Rev. Mr. Newlin's for tonight, it was announced, will be: "The Most Prevalent Sin."

Rev. L. J. Davison, the church's pastor, called attention to the fact that many members of the congregation had not as yet attended the series of meetings that are in progress. "It is our first duty to be present ourselves before essaying to bringing the public to this revival," he said. "These preliminary Bible readings of Rev. Mr. Newlin are alone worth a service without considering the outstanding sermon that follows." He accordingly urged that all the denomination devotees permit nothing to keep them away from the subsequent gatherings which the evangelist will address.

Rev. Mr. Newlin, at the outset of his discourse, affirmed his pleasure at the courtesy of visits to the revival of pastors of other churches in the city. "Though I know they are unusually busy," he said, "it is a joy to have thom attend. I am reminded of the testimony of a certain layman at a return visit to a series of meetings I once held. He told of his regret at seeing the meetings close and the consequent necessity of a return to what he called the 'ordinary preaching' of the pastor, but to his surprise he found that his minister spoke thereafter as he never previously had done; and that also a preacher who had not attended the meeting and whom he always had held as a 'weak speaker' thereafter was a forcible talker. Soon the opinion was reached that the change noted in both instances was in the spiritual metamorphosis that had come to him.

"When we cultivate the religious habit our spiritual appetites will be increased. Hence every ordinary food will taste good to us and do us more good than that which false appetites demand.

"I am a firm believer that God's word will not return void. Once as a revival was being concluded without a convert I announced one more song. During it a leading physician and his wife made a public confession for Jesus Christ, and 42 more persons followed them."

Rev. Mr. Newlin deprecated the changed duty of church clocks as he began his duty. "They used to be placed outside 200 years ago to indicate the time services should begin," he explained. "Now they are hung prominently inside so as to tell when meetings shall conclude."

Rev. Mr. Newlin averred that for the most part an erroneous idea was attached to the Prodigal Son. "The word 'prodigal' is not mentioned in any Scripture reference to him," he said. "He is simply the younger son and a type of all persons who are away from God. Many think they are not as bad as he when the truth is they often are much worse.

"Nine things are mentioned about this younger brother and one of these that 'he wasted his substance with harlots' was by his elder brother, who, biased, could hardly have given a 100 per cent estimate of him. The other eight were by Jesus himself. They form as it were planks to the porch that enter into his father's house."

The evangelist then commented in turn upon these in which for the greater part he held the young lad as showing no bad qualities.

"The first of these he held to be his request of his father: "Give me the portion of goods that will fall to me." "He held this to be but a natural demand. "All sometime get something from our fathers even though it be a very small token. He simply asked his share; he did not speak for the older brother's blessing. He simply would accept his own responsibility and elected to build up his own life.

The second of these was that "not many days after he went away." He did not slip out between two days; he left not in anger; he doubtless had his relatives see him off. There was nothing wrong in that. If you do not leave your parental home sometime it will leave you.

"Then as the third plank he went to a far country. That is not a sin. Horace Greely advised people to go west. Our parents pioneered this country; they sinned not. Neither did this young man by the fact he went far away.

"But in the fourth thing said of him he exhibited a rotten plank for this porch for "he wasted his substance with riotous living." But did he squander more than young people do today. You hear much of the high cost of living but what of the high cost of loving? How much do you pay to satisfy the sweet taste of your boy's sweetheart?

"Then in the fifth statement of him he 'joined himself to a herdsman.' He got himself a job. He did not hold up banks or filling stations. That was fine of him.

"He then 'came to himself.' Oonce a man is working he thinks properly.

"The he resolved to go home. 'I will arise and go to my father and tell him I have sinned against him and heaven. He did this.

"He then arose and came to his father's but he never got to the statement: 'Make me as one of the hired servants for his father embraced him and started the details of the feast.

"So comes the three sermons in one. The young man was first sick of home; then homesick and finally home to stick. Amen! That is the first sermon.

In the second sermon there was badness in his life. He caviled with his father, traveled to a far country and reveled in wasting. Then there was sadness that came to him. He went to the dogs, ate with hogs and lost his togs. But finally there came gladness to him. He ate the feast, his hunger ceased and his joy increased. Amen! That is the second sermon.

"The third sermon found him feasting with worldly sins. Nothing satisfied him. Then there came fasting. The difference between feasting and fasting is that the devil takes the letter 'e' from feast. But finally there was feasting again. Jesus put back the letter 'e' in fasting when the young man came to himself and returned to his father."

BAN SILENCING OF U. S. RADIO STATIONS FOR FOREIGN CALLS

International Week Committee Frowns on Suggestion.

ONE TEST FAILS

Both American and European Broadcasters Protest.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The silencing of American radio stations for international broadcasting was definitely banned today by the international radio week committee.

Opposition of both American and European broadcasters to remaining silent on alternate nights, while millions of listeners hug loudspeakers or ear-phones to hear little but cat calls and other ether howls was responsible for the decision.

L. A. Nixon, secretary of the committee, declared the results of the 1926 international broadcast, held last January, "while interesting were not worth the loss of programs from American stations.

"Last January's test will be the last international broadcast sponsored by the committee," Nixon said.

Many reasons have been assigned to the lack of results obtained from the January tests, which took place at a time when radio reception was unusually poor due to atmosphere conditions.

Thousands of Receivers Idle.

Even Secretary of Commerce Hoover, an ardent listener, equipped with a powerful set, reported little better luck than operators of crude home-made receivers.

The International radio week committee for the past two years has arranged that American and European stations remain silent at stated periods that trans-Atlantic programs might be picked up without interference. Many protests were received on the grounds that the average listener would prefer to get good reception from nearer stations, rather than nothing from abroad.

"Thousands of listeners reported fragmentary reception of overseas programs, but many hundreds of thousands failed to hear any programs at all," Nixon said.

"Thousands of radio receivers were idle on the evenings of radio week, when if ever, they should have been in operation."

Reports obtained by the committee from American and overseas stations indicated that the broadcasters were not in sympathy with the movement, while listeners and members of the radio trade were divided.

MID-WEST HIT BY BLIZZARD

Deer Hunters, Trappers and Novelist Curwood Snowbound.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The middle west was struck today by the forerunner of the blizzard and cold wave which has blanketed northern Michigan and Wisconsin.

A biting northerly wind, carrying with it a light snow, drove the mercury down at the rate of two degrees an hour from midnight when the thermometer registered 41. Forecast for tonight was a probable minimum of 15, which will be the lowest this year.

Extremely low temperatures and heavy snows were reported today in North Dakota and the upper Michigan peninsula.

Hundreds of deer hunters and trappers were reported snowbound with roads and trails covered by five foot drifts in the Calumet and Marquette districts of upper Michigan.

James Oliver Curwood, the novelist, was snowbound at his camp 60 miles from Calumet.

Coast guards on Lake Superior watched for lake, vessels, fearing wrecks because of the high winds.

SUNDAY BLUE LAW CAMPAIGN IN OHIO HIT

Elyria Mayor Says He Will Combat Movement.

THEATRES TARGET

Two Women Leaders of State-wide Crusade.

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 1.—The "State-wide" campaign to enforce Sunday Blue Laws, died in its inception here today when the Lorain county grand jury recessed without taking action against the proprietors of theatres which have operated on Sundays.

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 1.—The movement to launch a state-wide campaign for enforcement of Sunday blue laws in Ohio cities received a devastating blow here today when Mayor Harry Hinkson announced that he would combat the plan.

"Even if Sunday moving picture theaters are closed," he declared, "I shall use every effort to keep filling stations and other essential industries open."

The mayor's action followed announcement yesterday by Emma Vosburgh and Anna Reynolds, that after they had been instrumental in closing local theaters they would carry their campaign to Cleveland, Columbus, Toledo, Akron and other cities.

The two women admitted that they are acting independently of any organization in their efforts to close theaters here. They have testified before the grand jury and a decision is expected late today, in the case of John Pekras, proprietor of a cinema, whom they singled out for their initial attack.

Eight are Injured When Pennsy Train Is Hit at Gould's

Eight persons were injured when Pennsylvania passenger train No. 206, St. Louis to New York, was sideswiped at Gould's Tunnel, six miles west of Steubenville, last night.

The locomotive of the passenger train, which was eastbound, had just emerged from the tunnel when two passenger cars yet in the tunnel were side-swiped by a bulging merchandise car of a freight train west-bound. The sides of the two cars were badly damaged.

Physicians from Steubenville were summoned and hurried to the scene to administer first aid to the injured. The victims, none of whom was believed seriously hurt, were all through passengers from St. Louis. After being treated, the injured, along with other passengers, some of whom were frightened, were transferred to another train, also from St. Louis, enroute to New York, which arrived about 10 minutes after the accident, and continued toward Pittsburgh.

The train was crowded at the time and the engineer succeeded in bringing the train to a halt shortly after he heard the crash, probably averting a life toll. Parts of the two passenger cars were torn away.

School Work Before Athletics, Is Advice of Famous "Bo" McMillin

Geneva College Coach Tells High School Players to Stress Education Before All Else; Speaks at Kiwanis Luncheon.

That an education is the primary purpose of every student whether he is an athlete or not, was the substance of the message conveyed to Wellsville Kiwanians and their guests, the members of the local high school football team, at the club's noon luncheon meeting yesterday in the First Presbyterian church by "Bo" McMillin, former Centre college star and coach at Geneva college.

Approximately 72 were present at the luncheon, incuding George Bell, high school principal; Coach Earl Klinck, and Faculty Manager Robert Trumbull.

S. E. Daw, superintendent of schools, acted as chairman.

"The Object of Athletics" was the subject of McMillin's address.

"It is the duty of every coach," the football mentor said, "to lead the boys who are under his guidance to see that athletics are only secondary to scholastic work.

"Any student who believes that the attainment of athletic laureis is of the first importance is 'kidding' himself.

McMillin asserted that any coach is a "dirty cur" who asks his boys to work hard for him to the exclusion of other matters of greater importance and then have them awaken some day and find they have nothing. They become athletics tramps, he said.

Speaking of the "stars" whose names flash in the headlines, McMillin declared that they shouldn't forget that their teamates made them stars.

Each members of the local school team was introduced by Coach Klinck.

Release Brothers Who Threatened Attorney O'Grady

George Kouvalis, East Liverpool restaurant proprietor, and his brother, John, arrested by Chief of Police John Fultz, charged with attempts to threaten Attorney W. A. O'Grady, of this city, were released last night following questioning in the police court when the local lawyer asserted it was not his desire to press charges.

Attorney O'Grady had previously entered suit against Kouvalis for fees in a case in which he had been retained by the latter. He received this letter: "The blackhand and the secret justice has the honor to make the following demand on you: to withdraw your unjust claim filed in court against your former client and give strong reason why you failed to represent him properly for the amount you have received from him. A failure on your part to comply with this order, the blackhand will take its course to the limit." The letter was mailed from Steubenville.

The Kouvalis brothers are said to have confessed.

"Mother-Daughter" Night Scheduled at Evangelical Church

"Mother and Daughter" night will be observed at services this evening in the First Evangelical church in connection with the revival meetings being conducted by Rev. H. A. Frye.

Rev. Frye will speak on the subject, "What it Means to Be a Christian and How We May Know."

Rev. Frye last night discussed "The High Peak of Christian Experience." Quoting Hebrews 7-25, he said "Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them."

"There are preachers who say there is no such thing as an experience and that you cannot know when you are haved. One thing is sure that if you cannot know when you are saved, you could lose it and not know it.

"One man said 'If a man can know that he is serving the devil, a man can know if he is serving God.'

"When man fell from his state of holiness, he fell to the depths of sin, but the religion of Jesus Christ reaches down to the lowest depths of sin and pollution and lifts men up to the plains of justification and heart purity.

"The individual who has gotten a pikes peak experience in God's grace does not want to go down, for he is satisfied.

"There are some who teach the doctrine. 'Once in grace always in grace,' but Bud Robinson said that all depends as to what kind of grace you are in. Some are in God's grace and such may fall, but some are in disgrace and such are always in disgrace. They are always down and a man cannot fall down when he is already down.

"The forgiveness of sin and the sanctification of my soul is all included in the text. And a good case of regeneration will make you hungry for the experience of entire sanctification.

"The power to forgive sin is not delegated to any human being. Jesus Christ made the plunge into the abyss of sin, and there are no hopeless cases with him. The blood of Jesus Christ is able to wash us whiter than snow.

"Someone may say 'preacher,' do you mean to say that you are preaching that a man can live without sin?' Absolutely; Read I John 3:8. He that committeth sin is of the devil, for he sinneth from the beginning.' For this purpose the son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. The next verse proves that He was successful. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin. For his seed remaineth in him and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. Any man who says that we cannot live without sin, trys to prove that Jesus Christ has failed, and that he has not succeeded in destroying the works of the Devil."

Improvement In High School Grid Schedule Is Planned

Decker Seeks Games With Stronger Teams For Next Campaign

Salem, Wellsville and Akron East Certainties for 1927; Martins Ferry Probably Will be Home Attraction; Locals Will Try for Place on Youngstown South Bill.

INTRODUCING a new departure in schedule making for future activities of East Liverpool scholastic footballers, Faculty Manager Decker, in charge this year of the business affairs of local school athletics, is going into the Tri-State field for new games with new opponents of recognized caliber while retaining several of the old "standbys" that have always proved popular with followers of the Blue and White.

Decker has mailed letters to perhaps a score of schools in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania with a view to opening negotiations for games for the 1927 season and although his efforts may not meet with all the success this year that might be desired, they will have the effect of paving the way for future games, perhaps.

Salem, Martins Ferry, Akron East and Wellsville appear to be certainties thus far for next year's schedule, with the Salem and Martins Ferry engagements looming as home engagements.

The Salem clash has always stood as one of the big contests on the Blue and White card and deservedly so, because of the high brand of football dished up by the Quakers who this year managed to cop off county championship honors without a defeat.

There is no game on the schedule, of course, that would take the place of the Wellsville battle, which next year will be staged on the Orange and Black's home lot.

Martins Ferry has mixed with the locals on prior occasions and is figured to provide more of an attraction than a number of the smaller contests ordinarily billed.

Akron, which yearly produces a whole flock of good teams in Central, North west, South, East and others, will contribute another date to the 1927 schedule with East high doing the honors.

East appeared on a local field for the first time this year, trimming the Blue by a 6-0 count at Columbian park in the early part of the season. Next year's game will be played in Akron.

Decker also is angling for a game with Youngstown South, but may find it difficult to get on the strong Steel City team's card this year, at least. "Busty" Ashbaugh's outfit would rate as an outstanding attraction if a series could be arranged satisfactorily.

Efforts are being made to schedule Lisbon as high's opening game.

Fight Results

AT ALBANY, N. Y.—Tony Vaccarelli, of New York, won on technical knockout from Johnny Rocco, of New Rochelle, N. Y., in fourth round.

AT LOS ANGELES.—Mushy Callahan, junior welterweight champion, won on technical knockout from Paul De Hate of Compton, Cal., in first round.

TIGER FIGHTS EXCESS POUNDS

Georgia Deacon Too Heavy for Walker Battle.

By Gene Hoffman.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—It was third down with two to go for Tiger Flowers today in his fight to reach the 160-pound limit for his middleweight championship fight with Mickey Walker here Friday night.

When Flowers fought Sailor Huffman here November 22 he weighed 165 pounds, 5 pounds over the middleweight limit. Since then he has "downed" three units of the excess avoirdupois and has two yet to go. When the champion resumed gym work this morning he weighed exactly 162 pounds.

It is believed he will have little difficulty in making the weight, but whether or not the Georgia deacon will be strong enough at the division limit to retain his title against the hammering onslaught of the "made over" Mickey Walker, is something else again.

The challenger undoubtedly is in the best condition of his career. He is stronger and faster, and hitting harder than ever before, as demonstrated in his recent fight at Boston with Jock Malone. If Walker succeeds in pailing the champ on the jaw with that sleep-producing right of his, it will all be over except the coronation ceremonies.

Flowers, however, is a real champion. What he lacks in punching power he makes up in speed and strategy. If he is strong enough at the weight to shunt off Mickey's cyclone attack, he should stagger through to a decision. At any rate a real fight looms in the offing. It may be so close that providence will take a hand and decide it on the strength of the deacon's prayers before the battle. Who knows?

Walker's improved form since he lost his welterweight crown to Pete Latzo has made him a slight favorite in the betting.

An interesting card to support the main event has been arranged by Promoter Mullen. One bout will bring together Cowboy Billy Owens, Jack Kearns' latest heavyweight hope, and George Godfrey, the "black shadow of Lieperville," who Jimmy Daugherty maintains is the logical opponent for Gene Tunney. They will fight eight rounds in the semi-windup.

Wolcott Langford, another dusky son of Ethiopia, will meet Chief Jack Elkhart, in a second eight round encounter, and Chuck Burns of Texas, will fight Leo P. Flynn's star middleweight, Babe McGorgary, of St. Louis.

Hornets Set Pace.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Duluth's Hornets were setting the pace in the American Hockey association race today by virtue of their second straight victory over the Chicago Cardinals. The score was 3 to 1, the same as the first game, played last Sunday night.

The Cards were outclassed in every department of the game. They flashed only once, in the second period when Harry Reid took the puck the entire length of the rink to score Chicago's only goal.

Dunfield, La France and Peltier scored the Hornets' goals, one in each period.

BILL WALTERS MOUNT CAPTAIN

Deerfield Lad to Lead Purple Next Year.

ALLIANCE, O., Dec. 1.—William Walters, better known on the campus as just plain "Bill," has been elected captain of next year's football team by his team mates on the Mt. Union eleven.

"Bill" hails from Deerfield, O., where he played tackle one year on the Deerfield High school team. He entered Mount in the fall of '24, and played on the freshmen team on that year. In his sophomore year, he filled a guard position, but was shifted to left tackle on this year's team.

Walters has played a wonderful game the entire season on both the offense and defense. He is one of the reasons why Wooster was able to register only one first down through the Mount line on straight football. Walters does not play a spectacular game, but a steady and consistent one. He is a born fighter, and should make a splendid leader for the Purple next year.

"Bill" thinks his lucky number is 13, and does not allow any superstitions about it to bother him. To prove it, he wore jersey number 13 the whole season.

CARRIGAN TAKES HELM IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Bill Carrigau, new Red Sox manager, started right in today to build up his ball club. His first move, after agreeing to sign a two-year contract, was to wire Heinie Wagner, Sox star shortstop in the Carrigan days.

Manager Bill wants Heinie as chief scout. The old infielder was one of the strategists on the champion Sox in '15 and '16 and knows the Carrigan methods thoroughly.

Bill busied himself today poring into the dope of the Red Sox players, and getting a line on all possible trades that President Quinn has been trying to fix up.

Sees Huff in Action.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 1.—Walk Miller, manager of "Tiger" Flowers, middleweight boxing champion, was on hand here today to be present tonight when Danny Huff, Dayton negro featherweight, stacks up against Tony Sanders, of Chicago, in the main event at the McCabe club's indoor arena. Miller may sign Huff to a contract as the result of tonight's scrap. Joe Delaney, Dayton, faces Red Roberts, Cincinnati, over the six round distance while Leo Haney of Ashland, Ky., tackles Billy Seaman of Cincinnati in another six frame project.

Ahmid Ben Ali, Greek heavyweight wrestler, meets Johnny Mack, Cincinnati light heavyweight boxer in a mixed bout.

TUNNEY WON'T GET MOVIE JOB

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Gene Tunney has been discarded as the leading man for the motion picture version of George Bernard Shaw's novel, "Cashel Byron's Profession," it was learned today."

Tunney was reported as criticizing Shaw's story, which led Shaw to declare that he also had a right to criticize Tunney's fighting and to set up the claim that it was upon his advice and strategy that Tunney defeated Dempsey.

Carl Brisson, a Danish actor and dancer who has long been a matinee idol in England, is now slated to play the role once selected for Tunney, it is stated. Brisson has been well known as an amateur boxer.

The daily sketch states that a French concern has offered Shaw $100,000 for motion picture rights to the novel of Shaw's scenario collaboration. This was the sum Shaw asked from American producers and which they refused to pay.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON,

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

How far back you drag the clubhead in the back swing is largely a matter of personal choice, comfort or results on the ball. Some players of long practice drag the clubhead away behind the hands of a point where the left arm is almost straight out from the body, in such position that the right hand is almost on top of the left. They then get the wrists to work and elevate the club upward with arms and wrists. This requires a very great rhythm of exertion since there can not be the least jerkiness or uneven speed in such a back swing. Abe Mitchell uses this great drag-back. Perhaps a better way is the "little-drag," by which the club follows just slightly back of the hands at the take-off and then is caught up immediately. What will suit you best will be found through trying out different lengths of drag-back, and the different timing required, until you find the one that yields you the best result.

Kaer Is Coast's Contribution To 1926 All-America Selections

"Greatest Quarterback I've Seen in 26 Years" is Tribute Paid Him by His Coach, Howard Jones.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—Morton Kaer, quarterback for the University of Southern California, is touted this year as the Pacific Coast's contribution to the 1926 All-American. And if as many All-Americans are compiled this year as were last season, Kaer's expectations cannot go awry. At least one of a hundred experts should see the light.

To continue in a severely representative manner, Kaer is the greatest ball runner the coast has ever developed. Ernie Nevers of Stanford and George Wilson of Washington were more potent at cracking a line, but Kaer, in the open, is as elusive as a budget balance.

Howard Jones, Kaer's coach, declared "Kaer is the greatest ball carrier I have seen in twenty-six years of football." And Jones, former coach at Iowa U. and Durham university, may have seen enough to form a basis for comparison.

Even the renowned "Four Horsemen" of several years ago, Jones believes, cannot compare with his latest sensation. In unison, perhaps, the Notre Dame backs were great; man-to-man Jones rates Kaer the best of the lot.

Kaer's chances for selection on the Pop Warner-Tad Jones-Knute Rockne All-American are excellent. Warner has seen him play and Rockne will have that dubious privilege when Notre Dame meets the Trojans on December 4. Tad Jones is the brother of Kaer's coach. If the young man has it in him he will be hard to overlook.

"Mort" came to U. S. C. as a beautiful track prospect from Red Bluff, Cal., in the northern part of the state. His athletic past was studded with dash and hurdle triumphs.

How Kaer happened to come way down south to Los Angeles when Stanford and the University of California intercepted geographically need not be over-stressed. It may have been the climate. Then again, zealous alumni need no lessons from bootleggers in the technique of "hi-jacking."

Kaer played no football before coming to Troy. Since then he has done nothing else. Although a "three-letter" man, Kaer's vaunted prowess on the track has earned the Trojans exactly one point in all his college career.

Kaer's success on the field is due to his great speed, although he can dodge like a pickpocket when harassed. He changes is pace like a woman's decision and defies the laws of equilibrium in handling his legs.

In the three hardest games on the Trojan schedule so far—the contests with Stanford, California and the Oregon Aggies—Kaer was the entire Trojan offense and wasn't stopped till he ran out of breath. The manner in which he skirted around the end, or slid off tackle, excited the admiration of "Pop" Warner of Stanford, who forgot for the moment that it was his line that was being eluded.

In the California and Oregon Aggies games Kaer did everything but run his own interference. Even the wet field at Portland, where the Oregon Aggies game was played, couldn't keep Kaer from distinguishing himself.

If Kaer is selected, and he surely can't help it if he plays against Notre Dame as he has all season, he will be the first Trojan player to be honored with an All-American nomination.

Last year he led all Pacific Coast scorers in number of points accumulated and is leading the league at the present time.

MOTORS LAND DUCKS MATCH

Cop Two Out of Three From Altmans at Liberty.

Turk-Nash bowlers copped two out of three from the Altman Clothiers last night at the Liberty and hopped from fourth place to third in the standing, displacing the Smith News quint.

Bill Welsh, a league bowler, has already established strong claim to the Christmas turkey with a duckpin score of 218. Welch copped the Thanksgiving prize. Simms is out in front for the five-dollar gold piece award in ten pins with a 245 mark.

Tex Breaks Silence To Brand Frame-Up Rumor As Falsehood

Dempsey Was Too Proud of His Title Not to Give Tunney the Best He Had," Says Rickard in Defense of Ex-champ.

By Davis J. Walsh.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Breaking a silence that has been preserved these several months in the face of backstairs implication and innuendo, Tex Rickard today gave the lie to insistent stories that the Dempsey-Tunney fight had not been "level," in the patois of the back room; in effect, that it was a buck and wing.

Dan Morgan and Jimmy Johnston, famous managers, didn't agree with this cash and carry version of the fight, either, and said so. It seems they just didn't see it that way and they have seen much in their time.

Rickard's version was based on other premises. His defense of Dempsey was that the ex-champion was too proud not to fight.

"I know Dempsey too well ever to believe that he would do anything but fight his head off to keep the title," Rickard declared. "He was too proud of it to let it get away from him without making the effort of a lifetime. He's no different from any other man who held a championship. I never knew a champion who wasn't too vain to throw his title away and the great few of them who realized the challenger was a better man dodged the issue as long as possible.

"Dempsey wasn't that type, however. He realized he wasn't exactly right before the Tunney fight but never doubted that he would win.

"When it began to rain before the fight, I was badly worried and went to Dempsey's dressing room to tell him to be ready to start as soon as possible.

"'Never mind,'" he said. "'It will be over in a few minutes, anyhow.'

"Dempsey sincerely believed that he could march out to meet Tunney and bowl him right over. He had been told that he could win if he came out on roller skates and the idea that Tunney was a sap never left him until he was hit on the jaw in the first round. Then it was too late.

"As for me, I wasn't surprised that Tunney was able to win. I felt all along that he was the logical man for the spot. If I hadn't felt that way, I wouldn't have had him in there. That's only sound business policy. No man, most of all promoter, can afford to give the public what it doesn't want.

"Here's another thing: I could bring the Dempsey-Tunney bout back again next summer without the slightest 'build-up.' There's no doubt in my mind that Dempsey stands out as the public's choice as first challenger. Yet neither of us is in favor of this plan. I want him to meet one or two good men on his way back. He wants to prove to himself that he can come back before challenging Tunney. He wouldn't feel that way if the first fight had been phoney, would he?"

To the writer, it would seem that it is about time the case goes to the jury. A show-down, either one way or other other, is simple justice to all concerned, including the 127,000 odd who paid and paid and paid at Philadelphia.

SHEVERS VICTOR IN CUE MATCH

Bart Shevers was clicking the ivories in almost faultless fashion last night as he won from Grant Trout, 100 to 75, in the billiard tournament at the American parlors.

Herbert and Rodebaugh will match skill in tonight's engagement.

Promoter Suspended.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Fred Irwin, boxing promoter, will not do any promoting in Illinois for at least sixty days, it was learned today. Irwin was suspended for that length of time by the state boxing commission for his poor handling of the Tiger Flowers-Sailor Huffman fight here November 22. A lack of ushers and the resultant confusion over seats was the principal complaint.

"Most for Your Money"

Urges Auto First-Aid Booths.

That first-aid dressing stations or booths be established at dangerous points on highways to care for victims of auto accidents, was the recommendation of a coroner's jury in Selby, England, at the inquest of a motor crash victim recently. It further urged that a list of the nearest doctors be posted in every dressing room, and suggested that the plan be brought to the attention of the Minister of Transport of the British government.

Tractors and modern agricultural implements are being introduced on rubber plantations of Hawaii.

Lost Indian Tribe Loses Pension

A "lost" tribe of full-blooded Chippewa Indians—lost in the sense it cannot trace its descent and therefore does not share in pension money—is living on the St. Croix river, near Danbury, Wis. Here are Gus Premo; his wife, Annie Stone, and their two children. The papoose is bound tightly to a board which serves as his hammock-cradle as well as "baby carriage" on the back of his mother.

"LA BOHEME" IS REVELATION

Sometimes a filmed version of a famous classic is a failure; sometimes a revelation.

The latter term is the only one that can adequately describe "La Boheme," Lillian Gish's newest vehicle, now at the American theatre, in which, as "Mimi," the tragic heroine of the Latin Quarter, she shows the world a new Lillian Gish.

But this is not the revelation;—that lies in the story itself. The world is fond of "La Boheme" as the story is told in the opera; of its tender love story and its plaintive charm: but the tremendous drama of it—the real drama envisioned by the author of the famous old novel on which the opera was based, never showed, even in the significant Puccini music.

"La Boheme" in the film in a poignant drama of human souls; it is a story of love and jealousy; of faith and hope, of woe and despair, of humor and pathos. One is carried away by the hitherto-unsuspected immensity of the theme. But never for an instant does it lose that vital factor of a great film play—entertainment. It enthralls and charms —but it entertains always.

Lillian Gish has given the world "Romola," the heroine of "The Birth of a Nation," and other notable roles —but as "Mimi" she caps the climax of her career. Probably no one else in the entire world fits the role as she does; she is a veritable reincarnation of the author's brain-child. A wistful wisp of humanity, buffeted by the world, whose love can fire a man to genius; she is the spokeswoman of many a charmer of the Latin Quarter; an echo of the tragedy of the women of the art colony. She does it with an artistry that is superlative.

At least four men will seek the council-at-large place left vacant by the resignation of Solon O. J. Herrington, at the meeting of the municipal legislative body tonight.

They are:

George Goppert, potter, for several terms a member of council.

Otto Kommel, assistant manager and advertising manager of the American theatre.

John Darrah, ice cream manufacturer and former Sixth street confectioner.

Henry Holland, real estate operator and candidate for council in primary election in August, 1925.

A majority vote is necessary to elect. In case of a tie President of Council N. P. Kerr will be called upon to cast the deciding vote.

Herrington is the second member of council which took office on January 1, to tender his resignation. Edgar H. Heddleston severed his connections a month ago, W. H. Kelly local grocer, being named as his successor. Herrington's resignation is said to have been prompted by pressure of personal interests.

In September 3,405,800 pounds of fish valued at $110,000 were landed on the coasts of northern Ireland.

To End Severe Cough Quickly, Try This

For real results, this old home-made remedy beats them all. Easily prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous home-made remedy. The immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Royalty Enjoys the Movies.

The Prince of Wales and Princess Mary have recently formed the habit of "slipping" into the neighborhood movie theatre neear Buckingham Palace and enjoying the pictures without being recognized by the audience. Whenever royalty visits the theatre the event usually is quickly told to the world, but the prince and princess, it just has been learned, have been attending the little movie house once a week without it being known.
